Highland Gate says yes to paving offer

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

Residents of Highland Gate Estates have accepted Minden council's offer to cover the subdivision's roads with a tar and gravel mix.

In April, council had decided to cover the roads with a low-cost bituminous treatment, as well as provide asphalt gutters on the steep hill leading to Deep Bay Road to handle run-off. The cost estimated for the work is $25,000. Council also offered to pay $25,000 to cover half the cost of asphalt paving, as long as the residents paid the difference.

A group of the residents, headed by spokesman Doug Campbell, had considered seeking legal action against the township to get their roads paved with hot-mix asphalt in accordance with a 1982 bylaw.

Campbell has said he appreciates the present council's being the first to listen to the paving requests. And, although residents refused the option offered by council in April, in a letter to the municipality received by council at last week's meeting Campbell gives the go-ahead for the work to be carried out this August.

"The residents have reluctantly decided to give you permission to proceed with the tar and gravel surface treatment," he writes. "Many of the residents have endured washouts, pot-holes, blowing sand, unkempt ditches, etc. for an unconscionable period."

The residents of Highland Gate each received a copy of two bylaws along with their land transfer deed when they purchased a lot in the subdivision. A 1978 bylaw drawn up for Highland Gate Estates specified the standard storm sewers, curbing, gutters and hot-mix asphalt. A 1982 bylaw—agreed upon when Minden council, headed by Lloyd Walker, approached developer Roy Windover—offered to pave the road with hard-top in exchange for one of the lots in the subdivision.

It is normally the developer who puts in an asphalt road for an urban subdivision. This agreement stated that money earned from the sale of that lot would be used to pave the roads of Highland Gate. According to resident Paul Heffer, the lot wasn't even put on the market and was finally sold in 1987 for $10,000.

In a telephone interview Campbell told The Echo that just because the residents are accepting the paving, doesn't mean they are happy with the agreement. He added that, although residents could have taken the township to court, they were tired of waiting for work to be done on the roads.

"The Minden council wanted to get a roads subsidy and the cheapest would be a tar and gravel surface," he says of council's offer. "We've

Echo judged best in Canada

The Haliburton County Echo has been judged the best community newspaper in Canada in its circulation category for 1988. The award was announced last week by the Canadian Community Newspapers Association.

The Echo won first prize for overall excellence among broadsheet newspapers with a circulation of 4,500 to 6,499 copies. It was also awarded second prize in the best front page competition, and second prize for the design and content of its editorial pages.

It is the third year in a row that The Echo and its staff have been honoured in nation-wide community newspaper competition. Last year The Echo received third place in the overall excellence competition, along with other awards.

Publisher Len Pizzey said he is particularly proud of the recognition the newspaper has receieved from people working in the newspaper industry across Canada.

"Our goal, year in and year out, has always been to produce a newspaper the community can be proud of," Pizzey said. "We don't always meet the standards we set for ourselves, but we'll continue to strive for excellence."

The awards will be presented next month at the national community newspapers convention in Ottawa.

One G.W. Martin buyer isn't found

by MARTHA PERKINS

Staff Reporter

A beleagured softwood lumber industry is partly to blame for G.W. Martin Lumber Ltd.'s inability to sell off its holdings as one block, says the company's executive vice-president.

"We're accepting offers on an individual basis," says Bill Thomlison. "In the beginning, the shareholders' wish was to sell the corporation as one block" but no buyers came forward after last September's announcement of the sale.

'We're accepting offers on an individual basis.' says Thomlinson.

When asked why the company, which has its head office in Harcourt and mills across the province, had to be sold in bits and pieces, Thomlinson said "The softwood industry is in bad shape."

First of all, there is the 15 per cent tax for all softwood going into the United States which went into affect in January, 1987. Since then, "the Canadian dollar has strengthened and at the same time, the price of softwood lumber in the United States has gone down."

Negotiations are now underway with potential buyers, which Thomlinson says are of all nationalities. In May, the company sold off its Lumber Division trucking unit, consisting of five trucks. The drivers were either offered jobs elsewhere in the company or could find other employment.

Thomlinson says the mood at the company is positive, albeit with everyone wondering what the future will hold. Employees are always the first to know of any changes, Thomlinson says, and the public would then be notified of any sales.

Club 35 to expand but cost is a big concern

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

The members of Club 35 at Hall's Lake have voted to spend $35,000 to expand their facilities, and make the hall more accessible to seniors.

At a meeting last Wednesday, 20 people voted in favour of the $35,000 expansion, in spite of some strong opposition from the 14 dissenters.

The project will see the building expand to the side, and the kitchen and washrooms will be on the same floor as the hall. The idea is to lessen the number of times people have to climb the stairs.

"We want to get everything on one floor, so the elderly don't have to climb the stairs," says Murray Daniels, president of the club. "They're a terrible set of stairs."

The driveway will also be brought into level with Highway 35, which has been raised 11 feet since the club opened in 1947. The parking lot will be in level with the road to make it easier on those who drive to the club.

"You've got to start off on a hill," says Daniels. "In the winter, with the snow and ice it makes it very awkward."

In order for the expansion to occur, Club 35 will have to become incorporated. It will register with the government as a charity so that the executive can give tax deductible receipts. Daniels says the incorporation process will begin immediately. The cost of incorporation is $250 with another $300 for a lawyer.

Half of the money for the project will be supplied by the government in the form of the grant, and the membership of the club will have to come up with the other half through fund raising projects.

There was concern voiced at the meeting about the ability of the club to raise the money. The only source of income for the club is from the membership fees, and a euchre held every night, for which $1.50 is charged (you also get prizes for wins, and a lunch at the end of the game, so euchre is not a large source of revenue for the club).

"If we had the money I'd be all for the expansion and work hard to get it done," said Myrna McArthy, a member of the club. "But I don't see how we can raise that kind of money."

Although volunteer labour would cut down on the costs (the estimated cost of labour was the single largest expense at $16,320) Daniels is worried about using members of the club to help with he expansion.

"If any one got injured on the job," he said, trailing off. "We're

Dock plan raises houseboat concern

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

Discussion on the proposal for installing two docks at Allsaw Bridge Marine has resulted in the possibility of Anson, Hindon and Minden council passing a bylaw to restrict houseboats from the townships.

Marine owner Wes Lytle approached council at last Thursday's meeting to re-apply for permission to put in the docks and to address any concerns over the matter.

Although he had been previously told that municipal council jurisdiction doesn't extend to the construction of docking facilities, Lytle said he has since learned this isn't necessarily true and requested that council hear his proposal.

Deputy Reeve Bern Berry then took opportunity to say he has received many calls from people worried about the new docks. Their main concern is the possibility of rental houseboats being brought in. He requested that council put forth a resolution to research a bylaw which would ban the use of houseboats. Council unanimously agreed to the resolution in a recorded vote.

Lytle told council he foresees "two stumbling blocks" with the bylaw. The first problem is in the definition of a houseboat. Councillor Mike Maher agreed saying pontoon boats could be considered the same as a houseboat.

The second problem voiced by Lytle is that Lake Kashagawigamog lies in Minden and Dysart townships. Both municipalities would require the same regulations restricting houseboats in order to avoid confusion, he said.

Lytle also assured council that he didn't plan to provide docking for houseboats with his proposed facilities. "Houseboats have never been my intention, and I would sign an affidavit" to ensure they would not be allowed.

Lytle is proposing to build two docks, each holding up to 18 boats, which will extend 88 feet from the cement retaining wall on shore. Boat slips will be rented to people in the area who own property away from the lake, and to visitors staying at places such as the PineStone which have no water facilities.

Lake Kashagawigamog is more than 600 feet wide where the docks would be placed. Pointing out a sketched-in area planned for dock installation on a photograph, Lytle explained that both the Canadian Coast Guard and the Ministry of Natural Resources have already given him approval. But "concurrence is also required from the local municipality, as well as written comments," before the Ministry of Natural resources can provide a permit to build on Crown land.

Council informed Lytle that, as long as he provides sufficient parking, he may install a docking system to accommodate up to 36 boats. It was requested that Lytle provide bylaw enforcement officer Brad Bradamore with a site plan which would specifically identify where the sufficient number of parking spots would be located.

The township requires provision of one parking spot for every 27.5 square metres of commercial retail floor space, as well as one space for each boat slip.

Lytle insisted that it's not likely he will need parking spots for each of his boat slips. He said only 18 of the slips will be leased out and 18 will be kept by the marina. He asked if a public meeting could be held in order for him to get approval on a rezoning, but Reeve Ray Moore advised it wasn't a good idea.

"We are getting bombarded by people who are opposing the docks," Moore told Lytle. "If you can provide (the parking) we can't stop you from (adding the docks). I think that's how you should do it."

Planning for the new dock system was started because of a need for additional docking space. But the docks, which can accommodate boats of almost any size, have been the subject of complaint for some residents who are concerned that the system will increase the amount of traffic and boating problems on Lake Kashagawigamog. Still, Lytle says with an estimated 757 boats currently on the lake, the addition of 18 available rental slips would only increase the boat population by a little more than two per cent.

Fearrey supports boat control

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

Dysart et al Reeve Murray Fearrey says he would follow Anson, Hindon and Minden's lead if the municipality manages to pass a bylaw that bans houseboats from the lakes.

"We haven't dealt with it yet, but houseboats certainly would be a problem," Fearrey told The Echo. "There's no place on the water sheds we have up here for houseboats. That people will start using our waters for small houseboats is the ultimate fear."

The subject of houseboats came up at last Thursday's Minden council meeting when Allsaw Bridge Marine owner Wes Lytle requested support on his proposal to install two docks with a total of 36 boat slips.

In a recorded vote, council agreed unanimously to have clerk-treasurer Mary Mysyk look into a bylaw which would restrict houseboats. One concern which arose over a possible bylaw was that part of the Kashagawigamog area is owned by Minden, and part by Dysart et al, so

Guild of Fine Arts squeaks into the black in budget

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

By attracting more donations and keeping Rails' End Gallery costs down, the Guild of Fine Arts has climbed out of the red and squeaked into the black with a $264 surplus for the year ending March 31, 1989. That's a lot better than last year's deficit of $11,356.

At last Wednesday night's annual meeting, approximately 30 Guild members were relieved to hear last year's dire straits have been avoided. It wasn't without some costs, though, especially to the gallery.

In 1989, the projected budget for gallery program costs was $44,390. Actual costs came in at $36,942, $4,000 less than in 1988. Salary costs were down $1,500 (staff had agreed to a temporary freeze in salaries) and the advertising spending was cut in half. There was a $2,000 increase, however, in fundraising costs. If it wasn't for a $7,000 provision for working funds, the 1989 administrative budget and actual spending would have remained equal.

In total, combined program and administration costs dropped by $1,500. This saving was swallowed up by a $2,000 increase in Guild costs, attributed mainly to increased summer exhibition and sale costs.

Last year it cost the Guild $48,346 to put on the popular sale and the revenue accrued was $64,347.

In general, revenue increased over the year from a total of $84,267 in 1988 to $93,517, only $1,200 less than expected. Three grants helped to sustain the Guild: $12,000 from the Ontario Arts Council; $13,250 from municipal funds; and $1,591 from Employment and Immigration; all of which showed little increase over the last year. However, Canada World Youth participants painted the gallery and Dysart et al paid for a new shingled roof.

As well, a corporate membership campaign, headed by Barb Peel, was very successful and contributed to the Guild's healthy year-end surplus.

In her speech, outgoing president Virginia Muenzel said "luckily we had some plucky people on our board." The Guild's main financial worries were a shortage of working capital funds. "At a special brainstorming meeting in August, Alex McLeod and Barb Dawson gave us a clearer understanding of our finances and a game plan to work with.

"Reeve Murray Fearrey spent a couple of productive hours with us, having some candid conversations about the Guild's value and contribution to this community. Out of this came a $6,000 advance from the municipality of Dysart."

One other idea to come out of the meeting, the Winning Wednesdays lottery, appears to be off to a successful start with 110 out of a possible 200 tickets being sold by last Wednesday. But Dawson said the three committee members had exhausted their source of friends and now it was time for other Guild members to convince their associates to buy the $100 tickets. At least 120 tickets have to be sold because lottery laws state half the income must won in prizes.

Noting the future financial challenges, Muenzel said Dysart has agreed to increase its grant by $6,000, for a total of $18,000.

"After a winter of tough decisions and hard work, we managed to come up with a projected budget for 1989/90 that includes some long overdue raises for our very patient Gallery staff," she said. "We expect to have enough working capital put aside to cover next spring's lean months.

"This board, the various committees and the membership at large have done a tremendous job of pulling together this year. You are all to be congratulated."

Later in the evening, Muenzel diverted from her prepared report and thanked everyone for their help during her two years as president, especially her husband, Ed. "It's been stressful, it's been fun, it's been scary. And I've met some of the nicest people in Haliburton."

In other meeting news, Marilyn Burton, Pearl Foster, Marion Langdon, Alex McLeod, Maggie McClure and May Waddell were voted onto the board of directors.

As well, long-time contributors to the Guild, John and Marilyn Leonard, were named Honourary Members. The artistic couple has been involved with the Guild and School of Fine Arts for 17 years, volunteering their time whenever needed and adding sparkle to the events. "They have a special gift of giving," said Muenzel.

At last Wednesday's annual meeting of the Guild of Fine Arts, the full roster of board members was completed with the acclamation of six new trustees. The entire board posed for a picture. Front row, from left:Wendy Bateman, Virginia Muenzel, Barb Bolin, Marian Langdon and Margit Moraal. Back row: Pearl Foster, Marilyn Burton, Maggie McClure, Claire MacLeod, Alex McLeod, Elva Robinson, Jean Farrell and Barbara Dawson.

Club 35 must now raise funds

all getting older, and I think we should go this way (with paid labour).

If it appears the club will not be able to raise the $35,000 by January, they members have the option of ending the project, and returning the money raised through donations, which for some meant the club had nothing to lose.

"We can always cancel if we don't raise the money," said May Bradberry. "So why don't we just give it a shot?"

Some of the members felt other options may be available to the club, such as putting in a dumb-waiter to eliminate trips up and down the stairs. However, many agreed that it was time to modernize the club's facilities.

"We will soon be into the 1990s," said Daniels. "Dumb-waiters were used in the 1800s."

While not everyone was in favour of the expansion, the group did decide that a positive attitude was needed in order to make the project work, and the members agreed that nothing would be done to try and stop the expansion.

"I would hope that this won't split the club," said Daniels. "We can still pull the plug in January, but let's put every effort into it until then. There is no point in talking negatively now that we've voted in favour of it. I want cooperation from everyone."

Following the vote a building and a fund raising committee were established to start the proceedings. The building committee will take a look at the plans to see if any revisions are necessary.

The fund raising committee will be in charge of raising capital. It has not yet been decided how the money will be raised. The club will be having a barbecue chicken dinner in July, and a yard sale to help raise funds, and they may canvass door-to-door for donations.

been waiting for seven years to have anything done. We have the dust and the dirt and everything else to put up with, so we're certainly not going to stop any improvements."

There are 37 lots in the subdivision, with 19 homes at present and another three to be built this year. At a meeting in April, spokesmen from the Huntsville transportation ministry office told council they would subsidize the roads if they were covered with the low-cost tar and chip treatment to bring them up to suburban subdivision standards.

Campbell says he has a wait and see attitude about whether the road treatment will meet the residents' satisfaction. "I wouldn't say it's the end. We have given them permission to go ahead and get the road subsidy and they're doing it the cheapest possible way.

"We'll just have to take a look at the results of their efforts," he says.

Author will speak

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

The community will have the unique opportunity to hear a highly respected author speak on what people can do to support individuals with different needs.

On June 16, the Haliburton County Advocacy Resource Group, in cooperation with the Haliburton and District Association for the Mentally Retarded and Sir Sandford Fleming College, will present A Morning With David Hingsburger. A clinic co-ordinator of York Behavioural Services in Richmond Hill, Hingsburger is known to deliver humour with his message of how everyone must respond to the needs of all members of society.

As the province continues to close down the once-familiar institutions which did not always lend themselves to the residents' happiness, more people are moving back into the community. This sometimes takes adjustment on the part of both the people served by agencies and the community which welcomes them.

Hingsburger will "challenge the participants to look at new ways of providing support to members of our community." His talk will take place at the PineStone Inn. Coffee is at 9:00 and Hingsburger will take to the podium at 9:30.

Thanks to the efforts of the three sponsors, the morning is free of charge. For more information, contact Don Lethbridge at 457-2626 or Dave Woodall at 328-1055.

Store owner asks for help to get start on gas pumps

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Ingoldsby General Store owner Bruce Netheral has found out the hard way there's always a catch when you want to make a change.

Netheral approached Anson, Hindon and Minden council at last week's meeting for approval to install gas pumps across the road from his store to service boaters on Kashagawigamog and Canning Lakes. He has contacted various departments such as the Ministry of Natural Resources, the environment ministry and the county roads department, but says no one will be the first to grant permission for the proposal.

The gas pumps would be supplied with fuel from existing tanks already standing at the store through a line running under the county road. Boaters find the present system "very inconvenient," said Netheral. "Everybody has to bring their carry cans across the road" for gasoline.

Netheral has tried contacting the Ministry of Environment, and was told to approach municipal council for permission. Council told him that, since the pumps would be sitting on county property, he would have to approach the county for approval.

Mentioning that adjacent property owners have provided letters of approval for the proposed pumps, Netheral said he has already spoken to county roads superintendent Bill Obee who also couldn't provide a positive response.

"Everybody's involved, but no one wants to be the first to make a move," said Netheral, who added that all his work finding approval has been "pretty time consuming."

Netheral added that he believes municipal council approval would help get the ball rolling on what will be a long, drawn-out process to earn approval from a number of government bodies. "They just want to make sure council is involved in the situation," he explained. But council insisted that the matter isn't in its jurisdiction.

"Frankly, we're the least of your players," councillor Mike Maher told Netheral.

"Everyone else thinks you're the first because it's your junction," Netheral answered.

Bylaw enforcement officer Brad Bradamore told Netheral that council's only authority in the matter is over rezoning the property to allow the pumps.

Reeve Ray Moore said council has no jurisdiction over the land nor the road. He added that Netheral's biggest concern should be whether the Fuel Safety branch of the MOE will allow him to run fuel lines under the road and have the gas pumps close to the shoreline.

Moore then went on to say Netheral is in store for a long, difficult process for what might be very few benefits. "I don't see you making money out of gas pumps anyway," he told Netheral, who answered, "It's a service I want to provide."

Council suggested to Netheral that he send copies of all correspondence on the gas pumps to the municipality so that clerk-treasurer Mary Mysyk can start a file. "You'll get a quick response from Fuel Safety if you cc your letters to Anson, Hindon and Minden," advised Moore.

Minden to seek new industrial park site

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

A new location for Anson, Hindon and Minden's proposed industrial park is being sought as the former Clare Walker sawmill site is no longer available.

Reeve Ray Moore told council at last Thursday's meeting that the deal between the townships and Joan and Wally Bunn has been broken.

"The property is no longer available to Anson, Hindon and Minden, period, so we must look for another spot," said Moore.

The 97-acre site located on Highway 121 east near Highway 35 was to be divided into 40 industrial lots for industries compatible with tourism.

But at a council meeting nearly three weeks ago, it was revealed there was a dispute over the wording in the agreement between the Bunns' and the townships' lawyers. At that same meeting it was announced that Bill Payne had been chosen as chairman for the Minden Industrial Committee. Other members are Moore, councillor Mike Maher, Dean Elliott, Don Joynt and chief building official Brad Bradamore.

Members of the committee have been working toward setting up subcommittees to alleviate Payne's work load once a new site is found and purchased and development can begin.

Moore is in charge of laying out the park, getting prices on road building, leveling and cleaning of the lots and design of the entrance.

Payne has been chosen to look after and correlate all enquiries and to work with Moore in laying out the park.

Maher has been appointed to look into and recommend other areas that could be used for other parks.

Joynt will look after budgets, set up accounts, look into grants and look into prices for lots as well as other duties.

Elliot is responsible for all publicity and must look after advertising to promote the park through newspaper ads, brochures and information books.

Progressive Conservative insider Hugh Segal took a strip off Ontario Liberal administration when he addressed local Tories at a fundraising dinner on Friday. Segal suggested the growing public disenchantment with the Peterson government will lead to a resurgent PC party in the next election.

Children may be sent from area

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

There is a shortage of foster homes in Haliburton County, and the children who need them may be forced to leave the area, says Barbara Marin, the resource supervisor for the Kawartha-Haliburton Children's Aid Society (CAS).

Each year approximately 10 children are admitted into foster care in Haliburton County, and another six or seven are part of the relief program (the child enters a foster home for a weekend in order to give relief to the natural family). However, last year there were only nine foster families in the area.

Children will be sent to Peterborough or Lindsay if there are no homes available here. Marin says this move often adds to the difficulty of going into foster care.

"It is traumatic enough for the children to leave their families," she says. "If they stay in the same area, they have their contacts with school, and they can possibly visit their

Dysart may look into ban

any discrepancies in regulations would cause confusion.

Both Minden and Dysart et al councils have expressed concern over Lytle's proposal to add docking facilities at Lake Kashagawigamog.

"I think the concerned residents have wondered why so many boat slips are being made available at the Allsaw marina," says Fearrey, who adds that increased docking means increased traffic. "That's the fear of the residents in both municipalities."

Although houseboats haven't yet been a problem on the waters, Fearrey says increased dock space could lure houseboaters to the area and he would like to see precautions taken.

"There's just not enough space. Houseboats are designed for larger lakes, where they can be transported from 70 to 100 miles. Our lakes are a one-hour maximum drive from one end to the other."

Fearrey adds that the Kashagawigamog Lake chain is suited for "recreational purposes for both private and public use. I'd be concerned about houseboats and the problems associated with them such as increased pollution and noise."

Although he feels it's a good idea and a major concern, Fearrey says he will wait and see what Minden council comes up with before taking action to ban houseboats in Dysart et al. He is also not altogether positive that such a bylaw is feasible.

"How do they intend to enforce it? Do we have jurisdiction over that area? The OPP are the only law enforcement officers we have for the waters, but I don't know if a municipal bylaw can be enforced by them.

"I'm concerned that if we pass a bylaw, we pass one that we can enforce. We want to have some teeth in it," he adds.

Fearrey commends council for making a move towards a precaution against abuse of the waters.

"Houseboats have never been on our lakes. The whole thing is to have control on the lakes when they do come."

Youth missing

Watching the weather is a way of life for Jim Elstone

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

This week Ray LeRocque from the Atmospheric Environment Service presented Jim Elstone with an award of merit for his 21-year volunteer duties.

ANYONE CAN SAY Jim Elstone has his head in the clouds, but they should know he has good reason—the Haliburton County resident was honoured with an award from Environment Canada last week for volunteer weather watching in Ontario.

Elstone, who used to work for the meteorology department at the Toronto airport, has been carefully keeping track of weather conditions from his farm twice a day for 21 years.

He received the award of merit, along with a coffee-table book on Canada, from Atmospheric Environment Service representative Ray LeRocque during Canadian Environment Week, which ran June 4 to 10. Fourteen people in Ontario received the award for more than 20 years of service, six people for at least 30 years and five people for five years.

"People like Jim deserve to be honoured for all their hard work," says LeRocque. "The information they provide is used in government records and in courts of law. Their work is invaluable."

For these people, weather becomes a consuming interest and recording weather facts and figures on a volunteer basis becomes a lifelong hobby.

The daily routine of a volunteer observer rarely varies. Usually at 7 a.m. and again at 6 p.m., the volunteer reads and then resets two thermometers—a maximum and a minimum—recording temperature extremes since the last observation.

The thermometers are sheltered in a white box with louvered sides that allow air to circulate but prevent direct sunshine from striking or rain from falling on the instruments. This box resembles a beehive and is perhaps the most distinct symbol of the weather observer.

For weather watchers like Elstone, rain gauge generally sits on the ground nearby. The observer measures and records any rain collected since the last observation, then empties the gauge.

The depth of freshly fallen snow in the area is also measured. Notes regarding the character of the weather during the day—"snow and strong winds" or "dense fog all day"—are made. Some observers also have equipment to record such phenomena as wind speed and hours of sunshine.

At the end of each month the observer mails the monthly report to a regional office of Environment Canada. There the figures are thoroughly checked, then sent on to Environment Canada's Climate Centre in Downsview for final inspection and processing by computers.

From the resulting national records, information is available on demand. Most observers don't directly release any information to the public before it is checked in the regional office.

Environment Canada uses the information provided by volunteer observers to respond to nearly 200,000 annual requests for climatic data.

The volunteer network, although vital, is one of several meteorological observation networks in Canada. Most other observation stations are manned, but an increasing number are automated, especially in remote areas where few, if any, people live.

There are currently 350 volunteer weather observers throughout the province who take readings of local temperature extremes and precipitation amounts twice daily, seven days a week.

These records are compiled each month for publication and form the basis of climatological studies that assist commerce, industry, agriculture and the legal profession across Ontario and the rest of Canada.

In addition to reporting local temperature extremes and precipitation amounts, many of Environment Canada's volunteer observers also participate in the department's Severe Weather Watch program.

There are over 1,400 volunteers the province whose reporting of severe conditions permit warnings to be issued by the Ontario Weather Centre. Volunteer watchers also assist in flood forecasting and in verifying some weather forecasts.

Caring foster homes needed

family. It is important not to have too many changes."

As the shortage of families grows, the CAS continues to try and attract people to volunteer as a foster parent. They have placed advertisements in the newspapers, and they have held information sessions for those with some interest in volunteering.

However, the process is slow. "We don't even have that many people calling in and inquiring," says Marin.

Part of the reason for the lack of foster families could have something to do with today's society, says Marin. "There are more and more women entering the workforce," she says. "Families need two incomes to survive."

And government subsidies for foster parents aren't that high. The amount of money the family receives depends on the age of the child. At the moment a foster parent with a child younger than six receives $9.64 per day. For children between the ages of seven and 12 they receive $11.41 per day, and $13.35 per day for children 13 and older. Money for clothing and spending allowance are also provided. (The Minister of Community and Social Services will soon be making an announcement which will raise these rates.)

The main focus of the CAS recently has been to keep families together whenever possible. But there are sometimes good reasons for taking the child out of the home. The most common is if the child is being abused and CAS feels he or she wouldn't be safe there. (There are cases where the abuser does not live in the home and the child will be safe if he remains there.)

Foster care is also used if there is a problem with the relationship between the parent and the child. In such a case the child will go into foster care for a temporary period, and both parent and child will work through the difficulties.

As well, there is the relief program, which Marin says is "particularly important for single parents who don't have family members to help them".

Anyone interested in becoming a foster parent has to go through a series of steps, the first of which is phoning the foster care worker in Lindsay to give them some basic information about themselves. At this time the foster care program will be explained to them.

There is also a training program which involves seven evening sessions, and once a child is in their care, the parent must have regular meetings with the social worker, and keep in touch with the CAS if anything changes in the home.

Parents can specify what type of a child they would like to have in their care. For example, if the foster child is going to have to share a bedroom with a girl, the foster parents can request not to have a boy.

"We tell the parents about the child when we place them," says Marin. "If the child is not going to fit into the family, the parents can tell us."

There is no stereotype of who makes a good foster parent. However, Marin says they should be more than 21 years old, be mature, and "know what they want out of life". Having children, or experience with children can often be beneficial, but it is not necessary. It is also not necessary to be married.

Being a foster parent is an emotionally draining experience, and Marin says some people do not want to continue in the program after a couple of years. But she also points out that being a foster parent can bring great satisfaction.

"It is satisfying to know you are doing something for a child that will have an impact on their future," she says. "If the foster parent can help the child understand what has happened to him, then there is a stability in his life that he may not have had before."

If you are interested in becoming a foster parent please call the Kawartha-Haliburton Children's Aid Society at 457-1661, or the Lindsay CAS at 324-3594.

Glamorgan taxes up 10%

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

Taxpayers in Glamorgan will be facing a 10 per cent increase when they go to pay their taxes this year.

Part of the reason for the jump is a municipal levy increase of 13.8 per cent commercially, and 12.2 per cent residentially. Clerk-Treasurer Elva Bates says the increase is due to cutbacks in grant funding from the province.

Major municipal expenses for the upcoming year include purchasing a snowplow truck for the roads, and $10,000 to make major repairs on the grader.

Other expenses include the cost of fencing all four sides of the landfill site in Glamorgan township, as well as an increase in wages for those manning the dump. Last year council under-budgeted the amount of money needed to maintain the dump. They spent $11,000, and this year they have budgeted $21,368, plus an additional $14,000 for the fencing (which they expect will come in the form of a grant from the province).

The education levy was up 8.1 per cent for elementary schools, and 11.2 per cent for secondary schools, bringing the total amount budgeted to $469,435. Bates says even with the increase Glamorgan is towards the bottom end of the scale when it comes to education taxes.

The county levy was up 6.1 per cent, bringing the spending to $78,603. As a result of the government getting involved in more services, each municipality has to pay more taxes, says Bates, who adds that Glamorgan's portion is close to what it has been in the past.

Development corporation tops $1-million in loans

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The Haliburton County Development Corporation has now given out $1-million in loans to local business people.

Darla Towns and Maureen O'Hara, who have just started the Daisy Diaper Service, received the loan which put the corporation over the $1 million mark, less than three years after it opened.

The money has been given out in approximately 60 loans, and the corporation has estimated 146 jobs have been created. While not every business it helps can be a success, Manager Andy Campbell says the majority are still in business, and many businesses have got off the ground because of the help they received from the corporation.

"Some people are struggling, but they are still in business," says Campbell. "I can count on one hand the number that have folded since we started."

The Haliburton County Development Corporation was established in 1986 to assist businesses and stimulate economic growth in the county. The corporation will give up to $75,000 loans to each business, at interest rates that are competitive with other lending institutions. The repayment terms vary depending on how much the client can pay back within a certain time period.

In order to receive a loan from the corporation the party must go in to see Campbell, who will run checks on the person, such as a credit check. Once the checks are completed the application is given to the Board of Directors which must give its approval to each loan.

Campbell says most of the applications receive approval, but there are some that don't, and others change their minds by the end of the visit.

With some people "we've both figured out by the end of the conversation that the business idea not going to work," says Campbell. "Some we have just turned down."

It is unusual for the corporation to provide 100 per cent financing. In most circumstances the people involved need to have money to put into the project.

"One hundred per cent financing is a scary thing," says Campbell. "If you have nothing to put into it (the business), you have nothing to lose."

In order to make starting a business easier, Campbell will also help prepare business plans, ongoing counselling, bookkeeping services, as well as a project analysis.

If you do need to go to a bank, Campbell will act as a middleman so that your proposal is professional, and so that you don't approach the bank before you are ready to.

The corporation one of 42 in Ontario funded by the federal government under the Community Futures program. The organization is non-profit, and the money being lent is received from the government, and from the interest payments. The corporation will be giving $1.55 million to lend over a five-year period before the government leaves the corporation to fend for itself.

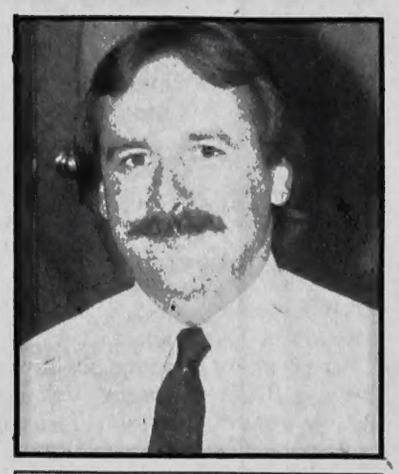
However, the Haliburton corporation is so far ahead of its projections that the directors have asked for the balance of funds, which they were not originally supposed to receive for another two years.

"We are ahead of schedule," says Campbell, who adds that when the corporation first started, "the government was skeptical that Haliburton County could support a corporation of this nature."

The loans are spread across the county (with the exception of Bicroft, where no one has applied for a loan). The money is being used in six main areas, the largest of which is manufacturing, followed by service, and trade.

While the corporation is involved in lending money to improve the economic development of the county, it is also interested in playing a larger role in the community.

"We are trying to become more involved with the economic development of the community," says Campbell. "We want to broaden our role outside of lending. If we are just perceived as being a mini-bank, then it is not good enough. We want to contribute to the growth of the area."



'We are trying to become more involved with the economic development of the community,' says Andy Campbell, manager of the Haliburton County Development Corporation.

Haliburton's arena and curling club thronged with people over the weekend, as the annual Home Shopw was held. Dozens of area businesses had displays at the show, and Saturday's rainy weather ensured that a steady stream of visitors browsed up and down the aisles and watched the various demonstrations.

School holds recycling depot

by SUSAN GROBER
Staff Reporter

Save up your bags, bottles, jugs and containers because a plastics recycling depot will be set up at Minden's Archie Stouffer Public School this Saturday.

Murray Clarke of CHANGE (County of Haliburton Advocates for a Naturally Good Environment), who recently arranged the county's first plastics recycling depot at Eagle Lake, says students from the school are helping to organize the project. Clarke says the depot at Eagle Lake wasn't advertised because it was mainly done as an experiment. "We didn't want to be swamped in plastics."

Through the trial run it was discovered that plastic items such as grocery bags, anti-freeze bottles, margarine and yogurt containers and household cleaning product bottles from detergent, bleach and cleansers can all be recycled as long as any paper—such as receipts and labels—are carefully removed. "Paper is the real killer in plastics recycling," says Clarke. "If everyone's willing to scrape labels off of any plastic bottles then it's fine, they don't bond to the plastic."

Still, from preliminary results from the Eagle Lake depot, Clarke learned that bags which have had food sealed inside cannot be recycled. Bread, milk and some frozen food bags are affected by residues and starches which bond into the plastic and create a film which can't be washed off.

Clarke says the Eagle Lake experiment was a success, and that 95 per cent of the plastics that were gathered and tested could be recycled. The materials were taken to Plasti-Cycle in Mississauga, and then tested to determine each different type of plastic and to see how well each can be melted down into pellets.

The majority of the plastics tested were found to be a mix polyethylene, says Clarke. "Right now the results are tentative. We won't know much until we actually do a list on re-pelletized products."

Editorials

Thank you

'Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp,
Or what's a heaven for?

Robert Browning

This week I have decided to drop the mask of editorial convention and write some personal words to the people who read this newspaper. I do so because I can think of no better way to express my sincere thanks to all the people in this community who have made it possible for The Echo to reach high, and to achieve an accolade its staff has long sought — first prize for overall excellence in the Canadian Community Newspapers Association 1989 competition.

As an independant newspaper with a single owner, The Echo is one of a rapidly disappearing species. More than half of all the small town papers in Ontario are owned by media chains — Newfoundland Capital Corporation, the Laurentian Group, Metroland, Thomson Newspapers — and each year brings a new round of acquisitions. In most instances, these buy-outs are the result of simple economics. Independant owners tire of the long hours, the rapidly rising costs, and the pressures of competition from outside their communities. Chains can spread their costs over more units, centralize production, and operate their own printing plants. They may not serve the community as well as the independant owner did, because their loyalties reside elsewhere, but chains are certainly profitable, which is why the Conrad Blacks of this world would rather be media barons than industrialists.

At The Echo, we believe strongly in the value of an independant voice, in taking editorial risks to help the community know itself. We are not always comfortable with the public nature of our jobs. We are not so confident as to think we are always right. On the contrary, we endure the constant pressure of self doubt, and must harden ourselves to the sting of criticism, listening to those whose views are fairminded and worthy of respect; trying not to be hurt by the few who are merely rude or spiteful.

Making a community newspaper is never an easy business; making one that achieves national recognition is an all-consuming task. I cannot say that we always enjoy it. In fact, there are many days when I and the other members of The Echo staff wonder if the effort is worth the personal price we pay. There is no such thing as a five day work week for Echo reporters, and 40 hour weeks are sometimes reached about mid afternoon on Wednesday. Every letter on the printed page represents a keystroke, every word the product of someone's mind. The paper must be created anew, every week, and the deadline is absolute.

Why try to make the paper better? Why spend so much time and money travelling to all corners of the county? Why write so many features, encourage so many columnists, delve into so many community issues, when it would be easier (and perhaps more profitable) to do less? The answer is both simple and complex. The work is a labour of love, and we are determined to make the best paper we can in any given week.

The recognition The Echo has received from its peers in the 1989 CCNA competition would not have been possible without the assistance and support of the community. The newspaper is a partnership among its staff, its readers, and the businsess who advertise on its pages. Each member of that partnership has played a key role in the paper's development over the years, and each, we hope, will share the pride of the "best overall" award.

To our readers — the people who make the news we report, who write the letters we publish, who open their doors and minds to us when we approach them for feature stories — we say thank you. To our advertisers, without whom quality would be impossible — without whom, in fact, there would be no newspaper at all — we say thank you.

The Echo has a proud past, but its future is by no means certain. In the end, it is the community, not the publisher or the staff, who will determine what lies ahead. We can only promise to continue our quest for quality, and to welcome your comments and ideas.

Council's voice needs to be heard

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our readers write...

To the Editor:

In the lively exchange of letters about the Haliburton County environment and how it can best be protected from the rough boots of progress, we've heard from cottagers and snowmobilers, resort owners and environmentalists. Everyone, it seems, except the people who make the decisions.

I'd like to know where Council stands on the various aspects of this issue, and when we're going to have a long-term plan for future development, including regulations and guidelines designed to protect the splendid natural qualities we all claim to cherish. I'd also be grateful for some assurance that decisions are not made on an ad hoc, seat-of-the-pants basis governed by the group that brings the most aggressive pressure to bear.

A case in point of particular concern to me is the confusion surrounding the future of the railway right-of-way that passes near my house. It' more than ten years since the last train ran, yet no comprehensive, all-season plan for use of the right-of-way has been developed.

In winter the Snowmobile Association grooms a single trail down the rail line, which makes it accessible to cross-country skiers and dog walkers like me. We step aside when a machine approaches, the snowmobilers slow down as they pass, and if I'm occasionally wakened by a machine at three or four in the morning, it seems a small price for the convenience of a groomed trail on the right-of-way. But the prospect of a multi-lane snowmobile highway is horrifying, not because everybody hates snowmobilers but because the scale of the HCSA proposal would make amiable co-existence between residents and snowmobilers impossible. There are a good many year-round residents close to the rail line whose winters would become a nightmare of noise and air-pollution. There are young trees, tilled fields and gardens that become, once covered by now, irresistible to that minority of snowmobilers who go anywhere they please and leave a spoor of beer cans and garbage wherever they go. There are bogs and woodlands full of birds and wildlife that would disappear in the face of such an onslaught.

We may see the wildlife begin to withdraw this summer and fall, since lack of regulation leaves the right-of-way open to use by motorized vehicles. Now that the ties and rails have been removed there are already some motorcycles and ATVs, even a few half-ton pickups. When the line north of Lochlin has been completely cleared and leveled I suppose we can expect dune buggies and dirt bikes.

What on earth is holding up the development committee's recommendations and Council's decision? I hope that Council will soon find the vision and courage to arrive at a balanced view of Haliburton's future, taking into account the needs of the snowmobilers, but not to the exclusion of other, less intrusive, forms of recreation.

Joan Irwin,
R.R. 2 Haliburton, Ont.

To the Editor:

I feel that I must add my voice to the debate on the expansion of snowmobile trails in Haliburton County. As the debate goes on I see many flawed arguments being presented. On the pro trail side, I see a few people, with vested financial interests in snowmobiling, trying to convince the rest of us that snowmobile tacks are paved in gold for all of us.

Well, I for one simply don't believe this, or the ridiculous spin-off spending projections which we hear bandied about.

I feel that more money (it seems that this is the golden calf of the 1980's) is to be made by following the trend towards "green" — promoting a pristine sanctuary where people can come to escape the double edge sword of "progress" and "success".

Susan and I, and practically everyone I know who has moved up here recently, did not do so to roar around the countryside on snowmobiles, but to enjoy the peace and quiet of nature. These people have a right to say no to this potentially disastrous expansion. The given factors are snowmobiles pollute — the air, the water, and our precious silence and certainly irritate more people than they bring pleasure to.

I'm not saying that everyone who has a snow machine is an idiot, or wrong minded, or ought to melt it down and turn it into cross-country skis and a backpack, but enough is enough and we certainly don't need more of them.

Michael Butz

FEIR PLAY

Creighton Feir

WHILE HAVING A COFFEE with Vince Connaughan of Stedmans on Firday afternoon the conversation turned to the subject on opening evenings. We talked about the good old days when Saturday night was the biggest night of the week when everyone for miles around came to town to shop and visit with their neighbours. We also discussed the fact that when the busy Saturday night era was over the shoppers changed to Firday evenings to make that weekly visit to town. When this didn't seem to work out the businessmen went to Thursday night with little or no success. During the winter months a handful of businesses along with the two food chains stayed open on Friday evenings while the food chains also remained open on Thursday nights. Mike's Milk and Westside Jug City are open every night of the year with the very odd exception. Vince went on to tell me that Saturday nights were also big in his home town of Eganville and he told me that he was brought up on a farm and can still recall the many good times he can remember as a boy coming into Eganville on Saturday night while his mother and father went shopping the rest of the kids would look around the stores in town. When I was a kid growing up in Haliburton my father operated a pool room and barber shop in the vicinity of the present Old Country House Restaurant. I can still remember how busy we would be when the local people as well as those from outside of town would make this night of shopping fun. On Saturday nights we could always count on some regulars to come in to get their hair cut or to shoot a friendly game of pool. Among these were Mac Sproats, Clayton and Gordon Cruickshanks, Fred and Sid Roberts, Fred Miller, Arnold, Wally, Gordon, Harold and Herb Fearrey, Merle and Ralph Pasquino and many others. Saturday night just wasn't another night, it was time for friends to get together and meet their friends and neighbours and talk over the events of the past week. This was also the night that the women went grocery shopping and the men took time out for a haircut and a few drinks. And while on the subject of Saturday night how can we forget the voice of the late Al Perrin coming over the P.A. system erected on the top of his taxi announcing to one and all that this was their night to attend the Golden Slipper for an evening of dancing where, as in Al's own words "you will meet friends and make friends." Will Saturday nights ever return to the village? We would have to say no. The closest thing now to a former Saturday night is the annual Midnight Madness Sale held on the Civic Holiday weekend.

If you don't think there's a lot of traffic every morning in Haliburton just ask Ray Scott who lives next door to the Country Rose and Shrub Garden Centre (formerly the Driftweed Restaurant). Every morning shortly after 7 AM Ray walks from his home to the Shamrock Shell Centre and back. He was telling me that the other morning he counted 198 vehicles in half hour walk.

If you were visiting the village of Haliburton for the first time and you happened to be driving in the vicinity of the Victoria Street School on Friday night you must have wondered if you were back in the big city. All the cars parked on every street and in driveways near the school were a sign that told us that the annual Fun Night at Victoria Street School was in full swing. This particular night never seems to lose its appeal and hundreds of children and adults from all parts of the county come into town for this special event. It may be billed as a night for the children but its also a fun loving night for teenagers and adults alike.

I stopped in at the Chamber of Commerce office on the by-pass in Minden last Thursday to deliver The Haliburton County Echo's Guide to Haliburton and area businesses magazine and had the opportunity to have a chat with the manager of the Chamber of Commerce, Shirley Rapson. She was showing me the cement island that has just been recently constructed directly in fornt of the Chamber office near the highway. According to Shirley the entrance off the highway was too wide before and the Ministry of Transportation suggested that the island be installed for safety's sake.

When some of the municipal employees came to work one morning last week they noticed that some of the sections that make up the big dock at Rotary Beach were missing. At first it was thought that they had been stolen but it was learned later that they had been found floating around near the town dock.

This seems to be one of those years when there is plenty of wildlife animals in the area and many have been spotted near the village of Haliburton. When Judy McCracken was out for a walk one day last week she saw two cub bears just below the hill from Hill Top Market heading toward Haliburton. Someone also told us that the mother bear was hanging around the town dump and the backyard at Hill Top Market. Deer have also been spotted in a few backyards in Haliburton. A few accidents have also occurred when deer ran out in front of oncoming vehicles. Many deer and moose have been reported in the Haliburton and Kennisis Lake areas.

POINTS OF VIEW

Quebec ideal for epicurean travel

THROUGH THE PERISCOPE

Martha Perkins

IF TWO PREREQUISITES for your holidays happen to be beautiful scenery and fabulous food, then Quebec will not disappoint. It will even make you want to return again and again.

Once more, la belle province lured us within her borders for our week's motorcycling vacation. We had thought of touring the shores of Lake Superior or taking the train to Halifax, but the desire for both something different and comfortable riding proximity led us back to Quebec. Only a province away, its culture, language and ever-present history make you feel as if you're in another country.

Quebec wears its age very well. The countryside is Canadian but the architecture and ambiance is very European. Housing styles seem to be of two families: In one, two-thirds of the height is covered in a colourful metal roof—red, orange, blue, green, turquoise—and the bottom third is either stone or wood; or, the first two floors form a square box before the roof curves into a half moon and gently peaks.

While time doesn't stand still and Quebec has its share of badly kept houses, home builders are showing a sensitivity to their province's appearance and past by copying those old styles.

Then, of course, there are the villages with their towering silver-roofed churches and noble manses. Today's worshippers would not be as willing to donate so much of their income to their house of God, but at least the church's former supremacy has left us with marvellous testaments of faith—and tourist attractions. Driving through the countryside, all you have to do is turn towards the next steeple and another 10 kilometres whizzes by.

With this great sense of history, where else would you stay in Quebec City than within the stone walls of haute ville? Its narrow streets are alive with history, protected by politicians who decreed any new buildings must reflect the nature of some of Canada's oldest buildings. This incredible foresight has paid off with dividends as tourists throng through those streets today.

But tourism is more than pretty sights. On our first day in Quebec City, we were looking for an auberge when we chanced upon a patrol of policemen. Motorcycles aren't allowed in the old city and expecting a reprimand, we instead received suggestions of nice places to stay and directions of how to get there.

Hospitality seems to be the pride of the city. At 5:30 in the morning, the streets were quiet except for the swishing of brooms as municipal workers swept up the garbage from the night before. (The horses which guide the caleches through the city are fitted with convenient receptacles for that age-old—and still as messy—bane of a walker's pleasure. At least you don't have to worry about nasty things being thrown out of windows.) And despite the crowds, the Quebecois seem more than willing to help—one gas station attendant phoned all over the city looking for the right motorcycle headlight.

This brings us to the restaurants. Staffing—as it appears to the patrons at least—doesn't seem to be a problem. Someone is standing at the door to greet you and if you have a car, a valet will park it for you. You're guided to your seat, given a menu, and soon there is another waiter or waitress asking if you'd like an aperitif. Another one soon arrives to make suggestions and take your order—no one is obtrusive but not a beat is missed. The bread arrives by some unseen hand, then the first course, then the second, and the dessert trolley is pushed by someone who knows that vacations aren't really the time to be thinking about calories or cholesterol. All told, four or five people are involved in the process.

Another European influence is how the serving staff obviously senses they too are an important ingredient in the meal's success. One waitress was bursting with pride as she brought each course to our table and she could hardly wait until we told her, as she expected, that the food was marvellous. At another restaurant, we had arrived late into the dinner hour and were given a small table around the corner from the door. It was the best table of the house because where you are gets lost in the pleasure of the meal. One of the waiters turned out to be an opera tenor in disguise and at the end of each song's performance, just nodded his head in unfeigned humble gratitude of the applause.

Let's not forget the cuisine. You could walk into a restaurant in jeans (there's no point packing dress clothes on motorcycle vacations because wrinkles mock any formality) and walk away content after a gourmet meal. Even lunch at a creperie was a

Silent ways speak of deep faith

SPRING IS A BUSY TIME for churches. I've been in culture shock from it all. Last week was the "rise" of Conference in the local United Church area. It was four, count'em, four days of business meetings. We opinionated on everything from apartheid in South Africa, dying children in the Sudan, refugees in Canada, Latin American liberation and the Palestinian/Israeli stand off, to what ministers are permitted to do with the private parts of their lives. I can usually handle about half of the scheduled meetings and still behave myself, so I only joined in part of two days. One thing is clear: the church is most beautifully the children of God when we sing. It stops us from the grumbling and sets us to joy and praise. I like seeing the folks I've known for so many years and getting caught up on their doings. That part is fun, but it isn't built into the clogged agenda, you have to slip away and grab a visit here and there.

After all this Betty and I decided I needed to go to a Quaker Meeting instead of another Church service Sunday morning. So we wheeled out into the farm land and made it to the Society of Friends Meeting just as someone was calling the kids in from playing in the grave yard. "Time for meeting", he called and the kids gave up the frisbie and slid into their pews. About twenty folks had gathered in this meeting house built in 1859. The floor boards were rough and unpainted. No carpets, stained glass or curtains. Everything was very plain, except for a small vase of flowers on a table in the middle of the circling pews.

No one spoke! Even the kids sat quietly. Some eyes were closed, others read, or looked calmly out the window. The sound of nature began to flood the meeting: birds singing, wind in trees, a baby babbling and the quiet sighing of the earth was all that we heard. At one point all the kids got up and followed a couple of Sunday School teachers out. The quiet waiting continued, a sort of expectation was in the air. I found it very easy to be with these folks. The church simply waiting is so rare. Finally, after almost an entire hour of the Church with its mouth shut, and elderly woman read a short passage from the Bible.

Again, no chatter, no sermon, just folks thinking about what had been read. After awhile, a woman stood and shared what she had been thinking about from the text that had been read. Then more quiet.

Finally, everyone seemed to know the 'meeting' was over. The elders, all women, began to shake hands and greet those near them and the rest of the folks did the same. As visitors, we were made to feel very welcome and people began to tell us who they were and where they came from. Quakers are about simplicity, listening to the one Teacher, and welcoming strangers. It was just what I needed.

That night, we attended the opening of the Anglican Synod at the Cathedral. What a contrast from both the forgoing. There were as many people in the Cathedral as there are Quakers in all of Canada. Priests processing in their colourful garb, choirs, Bishops and even the Governor General of Canada was there with her RCMP troops. A powerful organ led the triumphant singing and lauded the nation as well as the church. Standing, kneeling, sitting, responding to the prayers and listening to the Bishop's charge to the Church, we were kept busy in pageantry, beauty and the Word.

I kept thinking of those quiet folks out under the trees, who have no sacraments, no priests, no hierarchy, no symbols, except the readiness to hear and respond, while we joined more than a thousand others in the traditions of the Church of England. I was also reminded that many years ago I was hopping about leading retreats for clergy. I conducted a week long retreat for the Bishop of the Ontario Diocese and his clergy for about six days and joined in their rhythm of daily 'office': prayers first thing

Breaking free from tied-up feeling

OFF THE RECORD

Susan Grober

THIS SATURDAY I FOUND myself tied up with several of the tedious little restraints you try to get used to in life but somehow never do.

At least I should try to get used to such mishaps, since something different seems to go wrong as each day passes. The brakes on the car grind when it rains, the plumbing provides water that either only runs hot or cold or not at all, and I always seem to run out of change at the Laundromat (when I manage to arrive during its open hours).

Staying at the cottage used to be quite relaxing when it was my haven during weekends and vacations. Lolling in the sizzling sun —taking a quick dip in the lake when it got too hot— and staying outside from daylight to dusk doing absolutely nothing.

Nights meant playing cards and board games, swatting mosquitoes and listening to the loons.

Sure, I still jump in the lake, but by the time I get a chance to swim during the week the sun's rays have faded and the water is cold and dark. And the weather on the weekends has been cold and rainy. The sun only seems to peep through the clouds during the times I have an interview or an assignment to cover.

Sometimes it's difficult getting used to the fact that the area where I've cottaged for 22 years is now the place where I live and work. The retreat where I would go to "get away from it all" has now become my home, it's no longer a novelty to wake up to the call of the loon.

Of course, it never seems to be the noise of that graceful bird that wakes me up most mornings. Instead it's the annoying buzz of pesky mosquitoes that fills my ears and forces me from the sheets.

Weekends are the most strange time, especially when my friends and family are packing up to go home on a Sunday night. A few times I actually got confused and wondered why they weren't taking me along.

It's not that I don't appreciate living in Haliburton County. It's something I wanted since childhood, and my friend who visits often recounts tales of pollution, murders and bums in the street back home. But the cottage was always a place to be lazy, and since living here I've found it hard to relax.

This week I will visit Toronto for the first time in two months. I'm prepared with bus tokens for visiting, money for shopping and a list of items around the house I've been missing for months but my mother can't find.

I look forward to being back home, but realize my stay won't be ideal. I'll find myself tied up with several of the tedious little restraints you try to get used to in life but somehow never do. After all, why did I leave in the first place?

Some more cat litter-ature

IT'S NOT A CAT-ASTROPHE, but a couple of things worth mentioning have come up since last week's feline frolics, so we might as well continue on with our cat-alogue of items...

First of all, there was some good news and some bad news about the Toronto Humane Society. The good news is that no cats are in danger of being involved with this outfit as part of the Adopt-A-Cat campaign this month. Apparently, the Toronto outfit refused to participate...

The bad news is that they are still getting away with shifty appointments of friends to the board, according to a story in the Star that came out between the time I wrote last week's column and the day it ran.

It also listed some of the shenanigans they have been involved with in the past few years, and the fact that they went another $1.5 million in the hole in 1988. Maybe the public is trying to tell them to clean up their act.

And someone passed me another Star story that ran the same week about a lady in Montreal whose company, Cat Caterers, has moved one-up on the pet hotels I wrote about. A real cat lover, she goes right into the owner's home and feeds, plays with, and changes the litter for people's cats when they have to go out-of-town. (I think we have had a service like this in the Minden-Norland area for some time).

Catharine White has built a list of 400 clients in the Montreal area with her service, which also delivers high quality cat food and special litter pro-

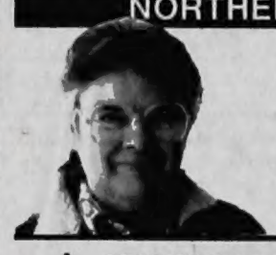
NORTHERN LIGHTS



Virginia Muenzel

ANNOUNCEMENT! ANNOUNCEMENT! There's a little excitement in the Muenzel clan this week. Ed and I got to be grandparents for the third time. Stephanie Sarah made her debut on Friday, June 9th, with no difficulties whatso-ever (for the lucky grandparents.)

She's not home yet, and already, we get to sleep through the night. Ah, grandparenthood. We can hardly wait to get our hands on her.

Of course, like all first-time parents, Stephanie's are a little nervous. Here's this wriggling 7 lb. 13 oz. personality who nearly fits in one of her daddy's big hands. I'll lay odds he looks at her and sees 20 years of bills for toys, braces, lessons and prom dresses. And maybe even some higher education.

Stephanie's mom and dad will start out, like all of us did, vowing never to make the same mistakes their parents made. But they'll make some of them anyway. Or find other ways of parenting that don't work. Then, when they think they've got child rearing figured out enough to try again, the new kid will enter carrying a whole new set of rules. And that's the way it will go, supposing they have six children. Until, finally, some 30 years down the road, when they've learned all they can about raising kids, become as expert as any parent can, they'll suddenly find themselves without a child to practice on.

And, soon their children will have children, vowing not to make the same mistakes and so on and so forth. I wonder why that is? Wouldn't you think after all the centuries of experience, with all the hundreds of books on the subject, and all the available advice, that parenting would a snap?

But that's never been the case, has it? Every parent on God's earth has had to learn for themselves how to deal with everything from colic, broken bones and chicken pox, to temper tantrums, phobias, and defiance. It wouldn't be so bad if we were always in control. But, instead, it seems, we seldom are. Before we know it, it's time to let the outside world into their lives. And we can't censor all the lessons that they learn out there.

In the end, all that we can do for sure is love them, and remember to tell them. Talk to them and remember to listen. Hold them, and remember when to let go. I wonder why that's so much clearer as a grandparent?

IT JUST FELT GOOD to be alive; it was that kind of a morning. The birds had joined their voices as the sun rose from behind the hills, turning the trees around the house into a musical world of twittering, sing-song delight. Misty haze clung to the surface of the bay, blanketing the mossy shore and brown green water with its ghostly presence. It would soon be gone as the sun's warmth sucked it up as through a gigantic straw. By the time he walked down to the boathouse his feet were wet from the heavy dew. Looked like it was going to be a hot one, so he thought he'd get some work done early. Other things always seemed to crop up and get in the way of the jobs he really enjoyed doing. Like building this patio.

This was the second year he had worked on it. All the ground work had been done, the base, the levelling and half the stones were in place. He had split them himself, carrying them one by one form out of the bush or around the river. Wherever he spied a good rock, he'd grab it and add it to his pile by the boathouse. Some of them were very large. He split them under water. It made for a cleaner, easier break. Like an artist he chose the shape, colour and placement of each stone carefully. He had already built the whole thing in his mind and was now simply following that mental picture. It was

Injury leads to a new position

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

A BLOW TO THE JAW convinced Cheryl Cooper that the infield was the place for her on the West Guilford women's softball team.

"I used to play catcher for a lot of years, but then I took a shot right dead centre," she says, pointing to her jaw, which was not broken in the accident, but did need to be put back in place. "I decided it was safer on third."

And her jaw was not her only baseball related injury. While playing third base someone slid into Cooper instead of the base, and Cooper tore the ligaments in her knee. She still has to be careful when playing ball, especially when she slides, but the injuries haven't deterred her from the sport she loves.

"I keep going back," she says, smiling. "I must be a brute for punishment. It's exercise, which is good, and it is a change from being at home or at work all day."

For the past 15 years Cooper has been playing baseball, and most of her time has been with the West Guilford team (she did play for Carnarvon when West Guilford didn't have a team).

She started out as a catcher, but admits that she always wanted to pitch. Growing up in an athletic family (her brother Bernie Nicholls plays for the L.A.Kings) she remembers that with the five children playing ball, three would pitch and two would catch. She was always a catcher.

"I always wanted to pitch," she says. "But I don't seem to be able to. Now I like third base because you are right there and into the game. There's a lot going on at third base."

Although her mother was always her family's "number one fan", her father, George Nicholls, led them all to athletics.

"Dad was always there for us," she says. "He would come out and coach, and he would teach us different things. I can remember him teaching the boys how to face-off on the kitchen floor."

Mr. Nicholls used to coach the women's team, and he led them to the championship. Cooper followed in her father's footsteps, and coached the team last year, but handed over the reins to Joan Scott this year, in favour devoting all of her time to playing.

"People don't realize the work involved (in coaching)," she says, "I just wanted to play. I'm the type of person who doesn't want to know the score during the game, and I lose track of what inning we're in. Now I can just play and let the weight fall on their (Scott, and her assistant Gail Teasdale) shoulders."

Third base, Cheryl Cooper

However, just because she is no longer coaching the women's team doesn't mean her involvement with the team is any less.

"She fulfills a leadership role," says Scott. "She can get the girls rallying. They really listen to her. The only person she is really hard on is herself."

Cooper is also the treasurer of the executive for the women's softball league, and she is worried there are not many people coming out to play ball. The number of teams has shrunk from eight when she first started playing, to four now, and many of the women aren't interested in playing ball two nights a week. Although there are some young girls starting to play now, Cooper is worried about the health of the league.

"I don't want the league to die down," she says. "We are letting some 13 and 14 year olds play, but we can't go any younger than that. I would like to

West Guilford women can't be beat; competition tries

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

The West Guilford women added another two wins to their collection by defeating the Minden and Rockcliffe softball teams last week.

In Tuesday night's game, the West Guilford ladies trounced the Minden team 28 to 9. Minden was leading 3-0 after the first inning, but they could not maintain their lead.

West Guilford pulled into the front in the second inning bringing home eight runs, and starting into their batting order for the second time before the third out. Minden didn't score in the second inning, bringing the score to 8-3.

The third and fourth innings were slow for both teams. Melanie Duchene came in for West Guilford in the third, and three Minden batters passed the home plate.

Things picked up in the fifth and sixth innings for the West Guilford team. Nine runners came home in the fifth, and another ten scored in the sixth.

West Guilford's commanding lead was too much for Minden to deal with. Three more runners came in, but the final score remained a resounding 28-9 for West Guilford.

The win against Minden was followed by a tight 8-7 victory over the Rockcliffe team on Thursday night. The game got off to a slow start with a 2-1 Rockcliffe lead at the end of the third inning.

Two Rockcliffe batters came home in the fourth inning, but West Guilford catcher Brenda Lavender narrowed their opposition's lead by hitting a home run, making the score 4-2.

Neither team scored in the fifth inning, but West Guilford picked up in the sixth, scoring two, while the Rockliffe team could only bring in one.

Going into the seventh inning trailing 5-4, West Guilford poured it on, and brought home four runs, while keeping the Rockliffe batters at bay.

With bases loaded and two runners out, Cheryl Cooper hit a double bringing in two runs. Marla MacNaull walked to first, and Melanie Duchene hit out past the first base line, bringing home the two batters in front of her.

The Rockcliffe's two runs in the seventh were not enough to overcome West Guilford's new lead. The final score for the game was 8-7.

Seniority pays off in soccer

After a tight first half, the Haliburton Senior soccer team managed to beat its young counterparts, the Haliburton junior soccer team.

The junior team had an excellent first half, where they were able to keep up with the senior team. Ryan Timbers and Jan Haedicke both scored early in the game, giving the juniors a 2-1 lead at the half way mark.

However, after a halftime pep talk, the seniors came alive, and the juniors couldn't seem to get back in stride.

"The team played well in the first half," said junior coach Walter Tose. "But they seemed to give up in the second half. Part of it was that they were tired."

"In the first half we were not in the game," said Brian Moore, the manager of the senior team. "We were letting them bring the play to us. In the se-ducts right to their homes as well as vitamins and cat toys. She says furry mice are a favorite with both the cats and their owners.

She apparently got into the business, after fifteen years of straight secretarial work, when she started making portable litter boxes. She also sells a top-of-the-line litter made from pelletized sawdust — imported from England, yet!

I wonder if this stuff is the same material that was being sold as fuel around here a couple of years ago, along with a special hopper to feed it into a special furnace burner. Somebody 'over 'ome may have discovered the cat using the fuel for litter, and saw a way to make a buck. Certainly, anyone who can sell imported sawdust to Canadians has got something going for him!

But if that seems like a wild idea, consider how many people use Kitty Litter — and that is just a form of clay that has been imported from the United States. It's made a fellow named Ed Lowe a millionaire, and got him tagged as 'the man who brought cats in from the cold.'

This was another case of a serendipidy — a term which is closely related to falling down an outhouse and coming up covered with diamonds. Because, what the man started out with in 1946 was called Chicken Litter...

It seems his father's sawdust business in Michigan sold the absorbent clay for cleaning up oil and grease spills, and young Ed got the idea that he could peddle it to poultry farmers as a nesting material.

One cold winter day in 1947, a customer came in to get some sand for her cat box, and because their sand supply was all frozen, he gave her a bag of the oil-spill clay instead. She soon came back for more, and before long Ed Lowe was a regular at pet shows and shops, selling the stuff out of the trunk of his '43 Chevrolet.

Now he controls 40 percent of what is a $600 million market in the U.S., employing 500 people in five states where the clay is plentiful, and says his biggest problem is the same as Kleenex — Kitty Litter's become a generic name for the product.

He runs his empire from a 3,000 acre farm not far from South Bend, Indiana, in southwestern Michigan. On the ranch, he has people studying some 111 cats, singly and in groups, to monitor their behavior towards each other, their food — and their litter.

His marketing people say they plan to put his grandfatherly face on all their products to make him to cats what Colonel Saunders is to chickens, and Orval Redenbacher is to popcorn. That's because they're introducing a line of cat food this year.

I think that's what they used to call 'market integration' when I was in the field. First you make a buck by selling the feed for the animal — and then you turn around and make another profit on the resulting mess!

Lowe takes some personal credit for how immensely popular the house cat has become as a pet. I don't have figures for Canada, but the American Veterinary Medical Association claims that the current population of 54.6 million kitties, they've passed the 52 million dogs to become the Number One household pet.

Lowe says the booming food business — and those very profitable veterinarian practices — owe their success to his making it possible for the cat to be popular.

"You wouldn't be able to own a cat if you didn't have Kitty Litter,' he claims. And for a lot of people with apartments, or even with homes in this day when both men and women work and there's no one to open the door, he may just be right.

each morning, a noon hour Eucharist and then prayers before bed time. The very next week I led a similar event for United Church clergy, the head office variety, and their day began with the eight o'clock CBC news. At noon we listened to "World Report" and of course News and the Journal before bed.

It doesn't end there. I was a speaker at the Synod Meeting Monday and Tuesday, so I had a chance to look in on that Church at work. They sounded much like the United folk except that they decided after a long hot day that they were trying to do too much and would therefore stop the meetings early and leave the rest to committees. What wonderful wisdom!

Well, spring is the rise of the churches for their annual meetings as well as the rise of flowers and the water level. Friendships renewed, great singing, inspired hearts are the purpose of such meetings. When they aren't doing that and they cut the rest short, it seems we haven't totally lost our sanity.

As for me and my woman though, I think we'll slide in amongst the Society of Friends for a little while. It is so good when the church stops talking and listens.

Closeness of Guilford team adds to success

keep it going."

In addition to softball, Cooper and her husband play mixed lob-ball, which she says is growing in popularity. Her team consists mostly of the women from the West Guilford team and their husbands, and Cooper says it provides a social opportunity for them.

"Lob-ball is not as competitive as softball," she says. "It is more for fun. We go to tournaments, and can have a lot of fun at it."

Cooper also coaches T-Ball in Haliburton. She says this year approximately 60 children signed up for the program. The children are between four and six, and all she can teach them at the moment are the safety rules of the sport.

So far this season the West Guilford team has not lost a game, and the team is hoping they will be able to repeat last year's win in the play-offs.

"It was kind of funny last year," says Cooper. "We had a mediocre season but during the play-offs we were never beaten. We won it last year, came close the year before, and we haven't lost a game this year."

Part of the reason for the team's success is the closeness. Cooper says the team is close knit, and each member cares about the other players on the team.

"We try to keep out spirits up," she says. "We know we aren't going to win every game. As long as we had fun and tried our best than it is all right."

Most of the players know each other from having grown up together in West Guilford, and from playing ball together, so baseball isn't the only thing that keeps them close.

"We don't just meet at the ball park," says Cooper. "we try to keep in touch and see each other after the games. Baseball provides a chance to meet people, and have a lot of fun at the same time."

Haliburton Warriors pitcher Tran LaRue helped ignite the flames of rivalry as his team defeated the Minden Hustlers Tuesday night.

Warriors down Minden 6-4

by ANNE HEWITT

Staff Reporter

The Haliburton Warriors ignited the flames of rivalry by defeating the Minden Hustlers on Tuesday night by a score of 6-4, only to have the second game of the series rained out on Thursday.

The players were energetic at the beginning of the game, with both teams doing all of their scoring in the first three innings. All of Minden's runs came in the second inning, with Greg Newell hitting a three run homer. One more run by Minden during the second inning tied things up.

Andrew Burk came in off a hit by Erin Nicholls in the bottom of the third, securing Haliburton's lead.

Strong defense, by both teams, helped to keep the score low. Neither team was able to score a run from the top of the fourth inning to the end of the game.

In the top of the fourth, the first three runners were caught out on pop flies. Barry Boice played an excellent inning, making two of the three plays.

cond half we started to control the midfield, which is paramount to winning the game."

Ivor Thompson had an excellent game, scoring twice in the second half. Kevin Sicard and Hans Walter also scored, giving the seniors their win.

While the juniors may not have been able to maintain their lead for the whole game, the senior team was impressed with the level of play of the young team, and Tose is noticing an improvement each week.

The juniors met Huntsville at the Archie Stouffer Elementary School field on Sunday, and played one of their best games of the season, despite a 4-1 loss.

"Soccer is a game where you can work for 90 minutes and only get two or three good chances to capitalize (on goal situations)," said Tose. "The other team managed to take advantage of all their opportunities, and we missed a few."

Cecil Smith scored Haliburton's only goal, and the score remained at 2-1 until the last fifteen minutes of the game, when Huntsville pulled ahead with another two goals. "It was really disheartening for them to know they had to come back (that much)," said Tose. "Huntsville has a strong defense."

While the team played as a group of individuals against the seniors on Wednesday, they performed as a unit on Sunday, and Tose says there was a 200 per cent improvement in that aspect of their play.

Although he says it is impossible to forecast the next games the juniors will play, Tose is confident that "we're going to be stronger the next time we meet both those teams."

Warriors beat the Hustlers first in the fifth inning, and John Ballantyne threw out the fourth batter, also at first base.

In the top of the sixth inning, Andrew Burk made two quick plays at second base, catching out the first two batters. Nicholls followed up with a throw to first base, taking the third out.

Ron Yake stole the show in the top of the seventh inning by catching out two batters, bringing a close to the inning and the game. The Warriors didn't bat in the bottom of the seventh, and the game ended with a 6-4 win for Haliburton.

The two teams were supposed to meet in Minden for a second game on Thursday, but heavy rain forced the game to be postponed.

Both coaches agree that the rivalry between the two teams may have given the Warriors an added incentive to play such a tough game.

"Our boys always play a little harder against Minden," said Coach Scott LaRue. "We were quite pleased with the win, since it was the first time we beat Minden when Brian Shaw was pitching."

However, while the team may be playing well, each inning is not as perfect as it could be.

"We played quite well," said Coach Bob MacNaull. "But we have to eliminate a few bad innings. We seem to have one every game."

'We always had a dream that we'd live up north. We used to travel hours a day to get to work.' says Glenn Birch who, along with his newlywed wife Kim is the new owner of Lochlin General Store.

Young couple branches out into new areas, business

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

Like a growing number of people, newlyweds Kim and Glenn Birch came to Haliburton County to get out of the rat-race of a fast-paced lifestyle.

Just married in February, the new owners of Lochlin General Store used to run a gas station at Jackson's Point in Sutton. Along with their dog Echo, they were thrilled to come to the area.

"We were business partners before we were married," says Mr. Birch. "We'd been dating for about eight or nine years, so getting married just seemed like the thing to do.

"We'd been looking for a store like this for a long time," he adds. "We didn't plan to come up this far, but we saw it and we really liked it."

Although the couple would like to maintain the atmosphere of an old-fashioned general store, Mrs. Birch says they would like to gradually increase the variety of items available.

"It will take time, but we'd like to bring in a little bit more of everything," agrees Mr. Birch. "But I'd like to see how busy it gets in the wintertime. I might put in a tea and coffee room or something for the snowmobilers and skiers."

Customers of the store are already used to a wide range of services at the store. Items and services from fresh sliced cold cuts to a deck of cards to your weekly mail are available.

"It's a little bit of everything," says Mr. Birch. This is what we planned for a long time. It's something we always wanted."

"And we got it," laughs Mrs. Birch. During their short time in the area, she has enjoyed taking time out to talk with people who come to the store. "There's such friendly people who come here compared to the gas station. In the city it's one big rush."

"People have time to speak to you here. And it's just not crowded," says Mr. Birch. "There's no subdivisions. It's easygoing. There's a better way of life here.

After living in Sutton for three years, Mr. Birch says he didn't know anyone except his next door neighbor. "Here you know everybody in town, or you eventually do, anyway."

One thing Mrs. Birch noticed right away is that the air in Lochlin smells much better than what she's used to. Mr. Birch likes the wide open spaces, "but we don't like those bugs, though. We came from far enough south that we didn't get hit with the blackflies."

Both agree they won't miss the headaches suffered when they owned a 24-hour gas station with from 18 to 25 employees. "Six months ago we just decided we were going to move so we did. That's it," says Mr. Birch.

"We always had a dream that we'd live up north. We used to travel hours a day to get to work. Now the furthest I have to walk is 10 stairs. And we both always like the country. We always liked camping."

The couple hopes to grow with their new community—they plan on starting a family soon. "We feel safe up here," says Mrs. Birch. "We have space, but we're also close to our neighbours. And the school bus drops off right in front of the store."

"We're tucked away from the bigger towns like Minden and Haliburton," adds Mr. Birch, who's quite pleased that they made the move. "I think a lot of people are doing that...just getting away."

Not all plastic recycleable

Plastics are complicated, and there are many variations on types which make recycling a difficult process. For instance, the two litre plastic pop bottles are known in recycling as PET bottles (polyethylene terephthalate). Norm's Disposal Service, which recently put in a recycling container at the Haliburton Landfill Site, does not yet have the means to recycle PET bottles, and Clarke says "CHANGE is trying to get that market open."

The pop industry no longer wants to handle returnable bottles, he says, so the pop industry-sponsored group OMRI (Ontario Multi-material Recycling Incorporated), is offering a rebate of $350 a ton for bales and $175 a ton for loose PET plastic.

"I'd hate to see us not collecting our PET bottles," says Clarke. "The pop industry is supplying massive quantities of money for recycling that product. And they're doing reasonably well, too."

Clarke says recycled PET bottles are used for such products as fibrefill for comforters and sleeping bags, injection moulding, auto bumpers and patio furniture.

"They've created a market for it, and they're willing to pay," says Clarke. "I think it would be impressive for an area like Haliburton County to make a move."

Riders see goal met in the 10th annual Ride for Sight

by ANNE HEWITT
Staff Reporter

The tenth annual Ride for Sight, to raise money for retinitis pigmentosa (RP) research, went off without a hitch last weekend, and organizers are sure they will meet the Ontario goal of $500,000.

Early Sunday morning the total count had reached $425,000 across Ontario, and Nora Frood of the Retinitis Pigmentosa Foundation, felt the money would continue to pour in, making the goal easily accessible. She also said they would be close to making the national goal of $1-million.

"Last year we raised $320,000," said Frood. "This year we are $100,000 higher, and still counting."

The money will go into research for RP, a group of related retinal pigment disorders. These genetic disorders affect how the retina functions, and causes problems with vision, including tunnel vision, blurred central vision, and loss of night or side vision. The condition is responsible for 55 per cent of all blindness in Canada.

The RP Foundation, by donating the money to research, hopes scientists will soon make another breakthrough and find a cure for the disease. Last year a Ride for Sight funded scientist was able to identify the genetic origins of the disease.

Eighteen hundred bikes, led by the OPP precision riding team, the Golden Helmets, left Pickering on Saturday morning, and arrived in Minden at approximately 2:00 p.m. Saturday afternoon. This group was joined by other groups from Barrie, Midland, and other spots in southern Ontario. Frood estimates that 4,500 people arrived in Minden at some point in the weekend.

The ride started in Toronto in 1979 by a small motorcycle club known as the York Wings. One of the members of the club had retinitis pigmentosa, and the club decided to have a charity run to help their fellow member. Eventually the ride grew to cover all of Ontario, and in 1983 it became a national event.

There were 19 separate rallies across Canada this year, and two others in Ontario—Kenora and Thunder Bay. Minden is still the largest rallying point for the riders.

An all-day rain on Saturday may have dampened the fairground, which housed hundreds of tents, but it in no way dampened the spirit of the riders. A variety of games were set up beside the curling club to test their skill and dexterity. There was also a show 'n' shine competition for riders to enter their bikes in. Hours were spent making sure every last piece of chrome was sparkling to the point where you could see your reflection.

At 5:30 p.m. the Golden Helmets provided entertainment for a crowd on main street by performing their precision routine. The team weaved around each other at high speeds, making intricate figure eights, and criss-crosses much to the delight of the crowd.

In the evening there was a dance in the arena for the riders to get together and congratulate each other on their accomplishments.

"The whole arena was jumping," said Frood. "There was a wonderful energy, and enthusiasm. Everyone was celebrating their success."

Close to 100 volunteers made up the support staff, which helped to ensure that the event ran smoothly. The whole event was organized by a group of 28 volunteer motorcyclists.

"Without the motorcyclists organizing this voluntarily by themselves it wouldn't have happened," said Frood.

The executive met weekly from September on, and there were about 75 local co-ordinators throughout Ontario trying to promote the ride in their communities. Organization for the 1990 ride will begin again in September.

A shuttle bus provided free transportation from the fairground to town, and Frood said most people were taking advantage of the service, especially if they were planning to drink. However, the OPP had a RIDE program set up in town, and 11 impaired driving charges were laid on the weekend.

Glamorgan council briefs

A regular meeting of Glamorgan Township Council was held Tuesday, May 16, and the following matters were considered:

Susan Clarkson and Bonnie Pettit requested assistance with an appreciation night for Gooderham Elementary School principal, Christine Bailey, who is leaving after 18 years in this position. Council granted assistance with mail-outs, and agreed to present Mrs. Bailey with a certificate.

Building permits will not be issued for extensions or alterations to buildings which encroach on the shoreline road allowance until such time as the road allowance is closed and conveyed to the adjoining owner.

A number of severances were then passed by council.

Keith Hodgson and Rick Wood reported progress on their proposal for development on the south shore of Contau Lake. Walter Leveck also has an interest in this matter.

By-laws 89-17 and 89-18, zoning By-law 87-23, were passed.

Vacation for Cathy Graham was approved from June 12, 1989 to June 16, 1989, inclusive.

The resignations from the Cemetery Board submitted by C.M. Donaldson and F.H. Hillis were accepted with regret.

Glen Madill and Alfred Trotter were appointed to the Glamorgan Township Cemetery Board.

Resolution 89/125 was repealed and Sid Stamp Fuels were informed to continue their contract until further notice.

Applications was made for funding under the Environmental Youth Corps 1989 for three young people to continue construction of the recreation trail, clean the Irondale (Burnt) River and capital work at the Landfill Site.

Council will consider its 1989 budget on June 7.

Tender for a new 6-ton diesel truck, in the total amount of $86,801.28, submitted by George Stockfish Ford Sales (1983) Ltd. was accepted subject to verification of specs by the Ministry of Transportation.

Lloyd Kramp was advised that it is not the policy of the Municipality to post signs indicating private roads.

A tender received from Ross Haywood under date May 1 accepted, subject to approval of the Cemetery Board.

Larson's Delta-Conic® Hull

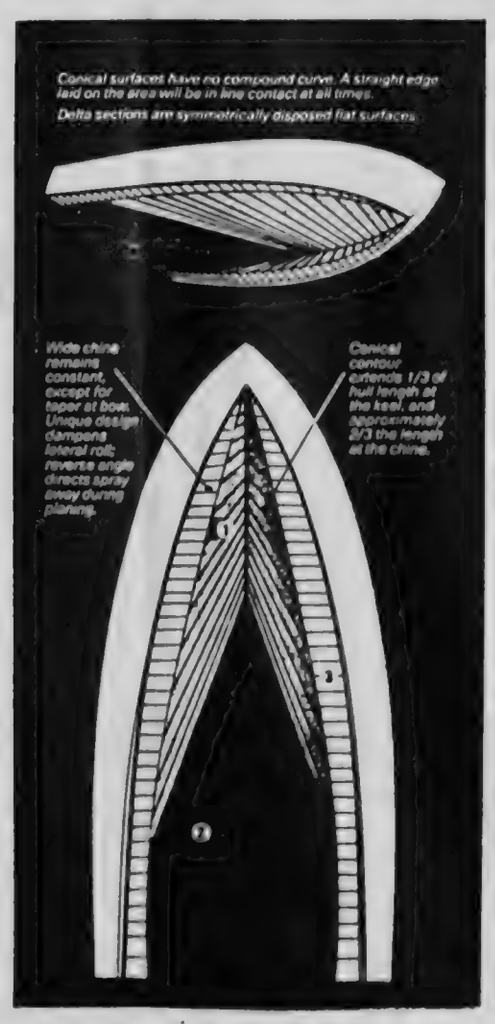
The Delta-Conic® Advantage

The Delta-Conic® hull incorporates three basic features that combine to give you superior performance and an exceptionally smooth ride.

1 THE "CONIC" The bow section has a deep entry forward and conical-shaped surfaces extending from the keel to the chine. This design provides clean entry into water for optimum waterflow with minimum drag.

2 THE "DELTA" Delta-shaped aft sections are of constant deadrise, delivering a superior planing surface. Thanks to this configuration, the bow rises gently, and the boat comes to plane at lower speeds than other hull designs. There is no waste of power "digging" into the water. And it not only stays on plane more easily, but it stays on plane even at midrange speeds.

3 THE CHINE An obvious deviation from normal hulls is the wide-flared chine bow to stern on the Delta-Conic® hull. This design provides an incredible dampening effect on rolling; there is no continuing pendulum effect that is so common in V-hull bottoms. The result is an exceptionally stable platform, as well as a dry ride — even at full throttle.



Meeting the needs of today's boater with famous Larson above waterline features and below waterline efficiency.

Larson Boats, long known for value, style and performance startled the pleasure boating industry in 1980 with their new hull design concept. Today, Larson pleasure boat owners and sport-fishermen alike enjoy the benefits of the patented Delta-Conic Hull.

The Delta-Conic Hull offers the best combination of interior space and hull design in boating history. By utilizing the features of the patented Delta-Conic Hull, Larson has designed their lines of pleasure boats and offshore fishing boats with unequaled efficiency and performance.

Reduce fuel consumption.
The Larson Delta-Conic Hull design provides exceptional helm response and reduced fuel consumption. By getting on plane quickly, the Delta-Conic reduces forward wallow.

Larson Delta-Conic helm response is especially important to skiers, boaters and fishermen anxious to get on the move. It effectively eliminates the bow to the sky problem common to so many popular outboard and I/O models.

Enhance your leisure cruising.
Today the leisure boater spends more time than ever in slow leisure cruising. Larson Delta-Conic enhances leisure cruising by reducing stern movement found in many other boats. The Larson Delta-Conic also has the capacity to stay on plane at lower speeds while maintaining on-plane control.

During a performance test, Powerboat Magazine found that a Larson Delta Sportcruiser was able to maintain plane at just 16 mph with its I/O turning at just 2500 rpm.

Handle the rough water with ease.
When it comes to handling rough water, the Delta-Conic really performs. The sharp Larson V forward of midship handles tough chops and ominous swells alike. When the Larson settles back down after a waterborne lift, the gentle V running amidship to the transom cushions re-entry.

Powerboat Magazine found the Larson Delta Sportcruiser handled superbly in rough water. "During the time of the Sportcruiser test, the wind was blowing at a very gusty 20 mph, and the water conditions were a combination of whitecaps with rolling swells. No matter from what direction we tackled the water, the boat diced through with incredible ease."

And, the Delta-Conic keeps you dry. Note the wide lip chine in the illustration. These "flats" which run the length of the hull, contribute to stability and a dry ride.

Because of the outstanding design of the Delta-Conic hull, Larson boats perform while at the same time conserving fuel. Whether in full flight from foul weather or in full chase of fish or other fun on the water, the Larson Delta Conic gives you the most for your boat dollar.

More room for living and storage.
"I can't believe the roomy feeling I got from this 25 foot boat." That's another comment from Powerboat Magazine's report on the Larson Delta Sportcruiser. Its outstanding cabin design gives you the feeling of a much larger boat. The Delta-Conic hull offers more room for living and storage space and efficient deck plans assure more room for fun at dockside.

Because of Larson's superb combination of hull design and above waterline features, Delta-Conic models are winning acclaim for both comfort and performance.

THE DELTA CONIC HULL IS AVAILABLE ONLY ON LARSON BOATS WHICH ARE ONLY AVAILABLE AT ALLSAW BRIDGE MARINE.

COMMENT

Environment concerns are an issue in county

MORE LETTERS

Echo readers write...

To the Editor:

It is very encouraging to be part of a county that has in many ways become part of a world-wide environmental clean up.

We are like a small piece of a large jig-saw puzzle that is slowly being put back together. The completed picture is one of an ecologically restored planet earth. If certain pieces do not join together, or if some are missing, then we will be that much further away from our hope of survival, and to regain a bountiful world.

The affects of any industry, including snowmobile tourism, must be gone over with a fine tooth comb. It is our duty to learn from past and present environmental neglect, and to apply this hindsight in a preventive manner.

One large snowmobile loop is one more contribution to pollution. Even now, a person has to be very accommodating while skiing or hiking where the old railway ran. As these machines zoom by, their presence lingers long after they've disappeared. The fumes enter our lungs, and they eventually enter the cellular make-up of plants and other animals. Water and landforms remain for now, but they only become weaker as a result of such invasions.

Noise pollution not only affects humans, but wildlife too. The chances of spotting on of nature's specimens will become less and less in the vicinity of the proposed snowmobile trail.

"Human nature" has often ruled our hearts, in this case with the idea that bigger is better, but "Mother Nature" is begging us to set sound priorities.

Haliburton County already has an extensive network of snowmobile trails. More elaborate trails may exist elsewhere, on the other side of the fence, but perhaps we should all take a closer look to see if their grass really is greener.

To the Editor:

While we were at the cottage last weekend, we were very pleased to read The Echo and get all the up to date information about the proposed expansion of the Alsaw Marine and Mr. Wren Blair's proposal re a convention centre. As people who are watching the situation very closely, we were very pleased that the Echo was reporting the events so accurately. We comment you for your responsible reporting, obviously geared to environmentally educated readers.

As seasonal and soon to be permanent residents of the area, we have been very concerned over the past years about the pollution of our lakes. After reading the horror stories about other lakes that have become polluted and having the opportunity to speak with one of the Ministry of Natural Resources staff who was collecting water samples in front of our cottage, we were very concerned to learn that Mr. Lytle was planning such an expansion.

Anyone who travels the waterways of the Kashagawigamog chain is familiar with the many narrow channels and shallow areas of the lakes, and with the meaning of the lakes name—Long Narrow Waters. We believe more concern for the effects such developments will have on the environment should be considered before approval is given for a development such as this, setting a precedent for more and more "docking" facilities on the lakes.

We were glad to read in the Echo that the Minden and Dysart councils were concerned about approval for the expansion and while I am sure they have thought of a lot of pros and cons to the situation, we would like to ad our questions:—Has anyone representative of the Ministry and the Canadian Coast Guard visited the facilities, the water levels were at their highest. May I suggest they visit in August when the water levels are dramatically lowered as our water is taken to feed the Trent Canal system? All the cottagers and permanent residents in the area will attest to the problems this brings. for people familiar with the areas, precautionary measures are taken when boating to avoid the dangerously low areas. Perhaps the Ministry should travel in front of Edgewater Beach in the channel and see the problems that could occur with even more boaters racing up and down, pulling water skiers. What about the concern the Ministry of Natural Resources expresses about power boats avoiding spawning areas and disturbing the lake bottom causing eggs to be covered with sediments that prevent fish from hatching?

How many gas tanks will this new development ultimately require? Will they have to ask for approval to add more? Also, as the water level recedes swimmers are forced to venture into the areas used by boaters. Who will take responsibility for accidents? Has anyone asked the people who live in the channel so many boaters must traverse before reaching Haliburton Marine what effect quadrupling the number of boats on the lake will have in lake summer when they want to swim in front of their cottages and boats are within a few feet of them?

Once they have given approval for this docking facility, how will they handle the situation when three or four more marinas ask for permission to do the same? What about commercial trailer camps that ask for approval to build the same kind of facilities to accommodate their renters? Where will it all end?

The Haliburton Marina asked for permission to dredge in front of their docks, and they were denied. On the same lake, how can they justify permitting a docking facility such as Mr. Lytle proposes? I know they are supposed to be floating docks, but what happens when the water recedes, will they be moved out further into the lake?

We believe all the permanent residents as well as seasonal have a great concern about the future of the lake. In just the past few years with the advent of pontoon boats, we have seen what can happen when weekend visitors renting these "floating party decks" do their thing till all hours of the morning. Voices travel on the water and it is very obvious both from the comments and the refuse that washes ashore in the morning that a lot of liquor is being consumed and as there are no lavatories on board, we don't have to say where the people relieve themselves.

We are pleased that the OPP do patrol the lakes on the weekends, but this is for a short period — how many patrol boats will be required if we end up with five or six docking facilities on the lake, adding perhaps 500 boats to the traffic flow?

Ontario lakes are for everyone's use as they should be, and it would seem now that as the Muskokas and Lake Simcoe areas fill up, the Minden/Haliburton areas have been discovered. Lets just make sure before approving plans for a convention centre, and this docking facility, which as stated previously, WILL set a precedent, that we have given due consideration to the effects such developments will have on the quality of the lakes in our chain. The Lake Kashagawigamog Residents Association is now being formed; let's hope their voice will be heard loud and clear in the deliberations that are not doubt going to take place as more and more commercial ventures are proposed.

Is the almighty buck worth risking the public safety and future health of our lake? How much more can the lakes absorb?

We comment Mr. Lytle for the job he has done cleaning up the property, and while we do not feel it is our right to control the future revenue sources of his enterprise, it is our right to intervene when we see the possibility of future pollution and safety hazards that will affect all the residents on the lake, because of his plans.

As I mentioned before, we were pleased to read that both Haliburton and Minden councils are concerned about these issues. Your attention as our local media, can play a major role in the future of the lake chain, especially when the reporting is done so accurately and responsibly.

You have our heartfelt thanks for doing such a good job, we hope you will maintain the momentum so that the decisions that are made regarding expansion on the lake chain will be for the benefit of generations to come. Anyone can see that our area is growing and flourishing, there are innumerable business ventures where entrepreneurs can make a good living, without putting the environment at risk. Thank you again.

Yours very truly,
Mary and Roy Blackwell

COMMENT

Our readers question how development will affect Haliburton County's environment.

To the Editor:

I wish Chris Carl the very best in his new business but I would like to bring something to his attention. About three or four weeks ago on Country Calendar (a CBC production which comes on Sundays at 1 PM but is now off for the summer), the subject was Haagen Dazs ice cream. This is an American company and in order to sell their ice cream in Ontario they had to build a small plant. Apparently they have a new product, an ice cream bar on a stick (which is made in the U.S.A.) and with Free Trade they wanted to flood the Canadian market with thousands of these bars. The Milk Producers Marketing Board and the dairy farmers feel this is going to be a threat to them and there will be a cut back on what milk they can produce. This was supposed to be checked into by the Board.

Who is supplying Chris with the bars? I think he should check into this before he starts selling this product. Free Trade is supposed to be so good for this country but just like cancer it is slowly creeping in and destroying our Canadian industry, thus causing the loss of jobs and will cut down on the revenue of the dairy farmer.

I think if Chris checks into this it may save his a lot of headaches during the summer.

A. Bridgewater,
Harcourt, Ontario.

To the Editor:

Having just received the May 24, issue of the Haliburton County Echo and enjoyed reading as usual, I want to tell you that your paper is a very outstanding weekly newspaper.

It is a bit of a turn around, after all the harsh criticism during last season's dry spell, to learn that the cottagers are of the opinion that the reservoir lakes should not be filled as full as they could be, now, with present water levels. Having seen first light of day in 1910, a lifetime at Fenelon Falls has allowed me to experience some of the pleasures and more recently the difficulties that have been prevalent from time to time in living with water levels. Many years ago some thoughtful pioneers in Fenelon Falls looked at the falls and decided to build a generating station to provide electrical energy for the growing village. There was even room for Lindsay Light Heat and Power to build one on the opposite side of the same falls to generate power for Lindsay. The locks on the waterway, at that time, were developed to aid the lumbering industry more than anything else. The power plants used the water by sharing with the navigation system during navigation season. The rest of the year the power plants worked away. There were dry summers then, too. To assure a useful flow in the dry season the lakes up the system became reservoir lakes to retain the supply. We had an abundance of low cost energy. Various sawmills cut many board feet of lumber using low cost water power.

At the same time our lakes were clean, great to swim in and yielded lots of great 'lunge and bass to come to our table. With better modes of travel the summer residents soon took up our lakeshore. The increase in population and greater activity on our lakes soon cleaned up our generous fish supply. The evolution that took place in the use of our lakes by high-powered noise makers, water skiers, polluting water crafts and such, has long since deprived us of what we originally enjoyed so much. However, all that new activity brought income for many. I don't charge it up to greed. I always thought it was progress in a changing society.

When all our lakeshore was taken up the improved roads and other facilities, like available Hydro, sent the holiday people further north, for instance, into the Highlands of Haliburton. Right away the groups and associations began to change our reservoir lake programme. Soon be heard "Stop holding water to too high level in the spring, you are drowning our water pumps and wrecking our shoreline installations". By the dry time in August and September, "Stop draining down our water supply to feed that terrible bunch of water grabbers downstream like the Trent Canal System and other users". Ah! that is when our power generating stations were finally killed. You cannot convince power users that the dry time has made it impossible to supply energy enough for a time until the wet season comes again. Customers demand a ready supply of power. That situation forced us to go to Ontario Hydro. In fairness, Hydfo had to think about "the cost of installed capacity" to take care of our rather brief part of the year when we needed them and they priced their help accordingly. It is a long and complicated story but the bottom line is that the loss of our reservoir lake function made it necessary for us to give up our "energy milk cow" and deal with Hydro at very much higher rates for our energy consumers. That is a loss we had to accept because who is to say the Highlands didn't have the right to develop a large and, for the community, profitable new era? I don't thing the Highlands were greedy. It was progress. And that progress meant that we downstreamers had to give up something very valuable. We did, and I may say at high cost to us.

Now I learn that the Kashagawigamogers are up in arms about the changes taking place with the lake's water quality, the noise pollution, the increase in development and activity taking away the old peace and quiet. How is it being viewed? Is it criticized as greed or accepted as developmental progress?

Without belabouring the point, it seems reasonable to point our how unfair they are who were lucky to get established first. There babies, yet unborn, who will want to twiddle their toes in the lakes, even in the beautiful Highlands of Haliburton. It behoves us to be ready to share, even at some cost to us.

I do not wish to be frivolous, far from it, but many of us cherish the hope to make it to Heaven when our worldly trip is finished. Hopefully St. Peter will not call a group together to discuss our admission and perhaps tell us that no more are to be allowed in. Such decision supposedly brought about by the earlier arrivals not wishing any more detrimental effect on their heavenly environment, Just a thought.

Protective fish clears lake so patio can be built coming along nicely, but slowly.

The hardest part was keeping the kids off the uncompleted patio. Since the rocks were not yet cemented in place, they could easily be knocked out of position. So everyone used the dock that ran along the side of the patio. But sometimes they got excited and forgot. Oh well, he knew he'd have to do some shifting around just before doing the cement work anyway. If he could just get the job finished. A beaver hit the water with its tail as though voicing his own frustration. At that moment that man felt a common bond with the hard-working animal.

He pushed and lifted and hammered for well over an hour. The only observer he was aware of was the great blue heron that swept majestically overhead and a young family of ducks quacking by the boathouse heading for the main lake. A good way to work up an appetite for breakfast, he thought, deciding he better get back up to the house and make sure they hadn't all died in their sleep. He had also worked up quite a sweat. His skin felt oily from the perspiration, and sticky in those places where the sweat had dried, holding fine particles of dust and gravel along his arms and chest. A dunk in the lake would make him feel better, to say nothing of his wife's reaction if he showed up for breakfast in his present condition.

The mist had evaporated from the water's surface. Easing himself into its cool reaches he felt like Alice In Wonderland passing through the looking glass. It was that calm. The water mirrored the trees in perfect reversal. It felt good and he swam out a little way, letting the water pass over every nook and cranny of his body, cool and cleansing. He thought again how good it felt to be alive, to enjoy the sensations of sight, sound and touch.

Turning back to shore, he knew he had to get up to the house before it got any later. Saturday's were sleep-in days but only to a certain degree. His foot touched bottom and he began to walk in towards shore, the wet sand giving a little with every slow-moving step.

What was that? He had felt something on his calf, a pressure. But it was gone in an instant so he paid no attention. Then almost immediately he felt it again. Quickly glancing down through the water to his leg, he saw a bass. In a flash it was back at his leg biting the skin, attacking him in its own small way. He stopped for a minute and watched in fascination. As soon as he moved, the bass would try to grab hold of him again.

Then he realized that is must be a female protecting her eggs. This was the first time he or anyone had been in swimming this spring. The poor fish must have been having a heart attack at the sudden invasion.

Later that afternoon he was working on the boat's engine near the dock when his two daughters came walking down, carrying their towels. They also had a pile of comics, two cans of pop and suntan lotion. Obviously they had plans involving sun and water. He motioned them over to where he was working and told them about this fish going after him that morning. They looked at him with raised eyebrows and condescending expressions that said, "Sure Dad, we believe you!" Then they moved back over to their towels.

A few minutes later his father strolled by, a towel rolled up under his arm. It had in fact turned out to be a very warm day. While his father felt guilty about not helping his son with the engine, it was really a one man job at this point and much too hot to attempt anything very physical. The older man said he thought he'd go for a swim and asked him if he was going in. Maybe later he replied and then told his father about his experience with the attacking mother bass. His father laughed and said he wasn't afraid of a fish.

One of the daughters had put her legs over the edge of the dock and was dangling her feet in the water, trying to work up the courage to go all the way in. Suddenly she let out a yell and pulled her feet out of the water. The fish had nailed her. The other, older daughter announced she wouldn't fall for this performance and boldly plunged her feet into the water. Smiling broadly, she made watery circles with her dangling legs. Then she shrieked. Intruder number two had been fended off by Mrs. Bass.

Their grandfather looked at them with disgust, proclaiming he did not know what reduced his family to a bunch of cowards over a mere fish. Slipping right into the water he started walking out to where it was deeper. He was determined to show them all. Abruptly he stopped, cursed loudly and quickly started making his way back to the dock, losing no time about it.

"My God, it felt like I was being attacked by flesh-eating piranhas!" he declared in some confusion. "I had no idea that's what you meant, son," he continued, looking over to where work continued on the engine.

"Look at it this way," he told the three of them. "By the time those fish have hatched, we'll not only have more bass in the bay but a beautiful patio from which to cast, since all the non-swimmers will be available to help me get this job done. Then we'll have the ideal place for a big fish fry."

gastronomic delight, and also our most health-conscious meal. There was only one restaurant to which we would not return.

Not born to shop, apart from the time spent choosing, and then sitting in, restaurants, we did do some sightseeing. One afternoon was devoted to riding around the picturesque Ile d' Orleans. The roads of Quebec were in themselves the tourist attractions.

We did save the best till last, though, and for that we travelled to the Auberge des Cedres just north of Montreal. Painters use their canvas as an outlet for their creativity, Mme. Duval uses her pots and pans to create dishes which are as pleasing to the eye as they are to the palate. You simply do not rush through one of her meals.

And as a fitting end to our epicurean and delightful country road vacation, we had a gourmet breakfast at a bed and breakfast, The Pinery, in Calabogie: fresh melon and strawberries, homemade oat bran muffins and cottage cheese pancakes with maple syrup. (We had told Mrs. Jamieson about the week-long sabbatical from dietary concerns and to her credit, the former nurse didn't make us forego taste during our last meal away from home.)

Will we go back? We've already made the promises.

Reserve limes forest for ecology's sake

by MARTHA PERKINS
Staff Reporter

THE SKIDDER CRASHED through the forest, crushing the underbrush beneath its huge, treaded tires. All was not destruction, however; like Hansel and Gretel protecting themselves with a trail of bread crumbs, the lumbering machine was leaving tiny pellets in its wake for a good reason.

But even though some people would argue these small stones of lime won't be any more successful in their task than the imaginary children's crumbs, the owners of the forest have faith. After all, the survival of these trees is a very real concern, and happy endings are only guaranteed in fairy tales.

"Somebody has to start," Dr. Peter Schleifenbaum says of why he and his family are liming approximately 60 acres of their 50,000-acre Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve. Without the lime, they think their trees could die from the effects of acid rain.

It's an expensive proposition, especially in light of the fact no one has unequivocally stated acid rain is causing forest dieback. The Schleifenbaums hope that by monitoring their attempts to protect their trees, scientists and politicians will one day have their proof that an ounce of protection—lime—is worth a pound of cure.

Learning from Germany's experience

Those attempts to cure a forest in decline can be seen in their native Germany, where vast tracks of forests have been killed. The Black Forest is now a dead forest, thanks to the industrialization which has made the economy prosper at the price of environmental stability.

"The first time I realized it, I wanted to sell Christmas trees in Germany," Dr. Schleifenbaum, who has his doctorate in forestry, remembers. A potential buyer toured the stand of trees and came back with the remark, "Do you expect anyone to set up yellow Christmas trees?"

Looking at his trees grow from day to day, Dr. Schleifenbaum hadn't noticed their gradual decline. Then he learned that "more than 50 per cent of forests are either dead, dying or in serious trouble. The scale of destruction is massive."

Not wanting to see this destruction repeated in Canada, Dr. Schleifenbaum and his wife, Elka, invited retired chemist Michael Collins to the reserve. For a few days this spring, he tested the Ph levels of a soil.

A measure of acidity

The Ph scale is a measure of acidity. Ph7 is neutral, rain has a normal Ph of 5.8, and soil that of 5.5. Weak vinegar on the other hand is Ph3.5 and some soils in Europe have a reading of Ph2.7. However, it's important to note that Ph is measured in a logarithmic scale; that is, if you have a change from Ph5 to Ph4, you increase the acidity 10 fold. In other words, you have 10 times more acid.

There are naturally occurring periods of acidification, Mr. Collins explained last Wednesday, as he and Ron and Sharon Lawrence arrived at the reserve to watch the liming. When volcanos erupt, they discharge large amounts of sulphur which, when mixed with the moisture in the air turns into sulfuric acid. This becomes part of the rain, and upon falling on the ground, acidifies the soil.

"After the volcano dies down, nature recovers," Mr. Collins says. "The problem with man-made sulfuric acid (from industries) is that it doesn't stop. It keeps going and gets greater."

Soil is a very complex compound. In between layers of silicate, or sand, you can find such things as calcium, magnesium and aluminum. In some parts of the countryside there's a lot of limestone, which like calcium, acts as a buffer. (A base—limestone or baking soda—reacts with the acid and neutralizes it.)

"Sulfuric acid leaches out the available nitrates, frees the aluminum and heavy metals, and basically prevents the small amount of calcium from acting as a buffer," Mr. Collins explains.

Tums for the trees

By liming the forest floor, you are adding the base which will neutralize the rain. Mr. Lawrence has a simple way of explaining it: "The soil has got heartburn and you need to give it Tums."

In Canada, one of the biggest producers of airborn sulphur are the nickel mines in Sudbury. The Super Stack was built to make that city cleaner, and now the clouds simply pick up the sulphur at higher altitudes. In a high pressure area, most of our sulphur comes from Sudbury; in low pressure areas, most of it comes from the Ohio Valley.

"What we've got here is pollution. We're putting something into the environment which wasn't there before."

Some people don't buy that argument and say this is all speculation. Dr. Schleifenbaum stands by his case. "The example is Europe and North America has to learn from Europe very quickly. The potential of soil to cope with acidity is higher in Europe and yet this destruction occurred. In Europe there's lots of calcium and magnesium. Here they're very limited."

Dissenters argue forest decline can be attributed to drought and in places such as Haliburton County, caterpillar infestations. But Dr. Schleifenbaum says "Europe lost entire forests and they didn't have a drought. Big forests are laying vast and the soil is sterilized."

Red lakes better than clear ones

"It's too bad acid rain can't turn the lakes red," says Mr. Collins. Though it may seem like a blessing, lakes killed by acid rain are crystal clear. That's because there's no life in them—no plants, no fish. Unseen, however, is the mercury and lead, so don't be fooled into drinking the water.

As Mr. Lawrence, a noted naturalist author who writes a column in the Echo's County Life, points out, acid rain is not the sole contributor to forest dieback. Drought and caterpillars are killing trees, but this does not negate the affects of acid rain. "It's not just a single punch. But what's throwing the knock-out punch is acid rain."

"Growth rings show the trees are under stress," Dr. Schleifenbaum says. (A healthy tree will have wide growth rings, while sick trees will only grow marginally.) "I firmly believe that if we had a healthy forest and soil, the caterpillars couldn't cause such havoc."

Germany is reacting by spending billions of dollars on liming the forests. Approximately 100,000 acres are done per year and if a plane is used, the cost is astronomical: $150-$200 a tonne, one tonne per acre. Dr. Schleifenbaum says this is the price of the cure the Canadian government will have to pay in the future, especially since it's not paying much attention to prevention.

The three men—Dr. Schleifenbaum, Mr. Collins, and Mr. Lawrence—don't give the government high marks in protecting the environment, despite any claims to the contrary.

For instance, the province has boasted that sulphur emissions were at 83 per cent of the new recommended levels. However, Dr. Schleifenbaum says "the legal limit is a joke. They took the highest level tolerable and cut it in half, pushing the new deadline for emission reductions ahead a little further. Cutting emissions in half means the forests are dying at half the pace."

His figures show that 20 kilograms of sulfuric acid fall on the reserve's soil each year. For this reason, both he and Mr. Collins were surprised to find soil Ph levels hovering between 4.8 and 5.2. (In Muskoka they've had Ph readings of 4.2.) To Mr. Collins, that means they got to the forest in time.

"We're looking at the upper end of the stress," he says. "That's when we've got to do something."

A farming tool in the forest

Liming has been done in Haliburton County already. For the past several years, many farmers have been spreading lime on their fields, especially if they grow alfalfa, says Godfrey Tyler of the Haliburton County Farmer's Association. Alfalfa responds better when the Ph level is 6 or 6.5, and most soils read between 4.9 and 5.5.

"The Parry Sound people tend to use a lot more than we do," Mr. Tyler says. "Lime tends to be something larger producers use as a management tool. If it was less costly, there'd probably be more people using it."

Mr. Tyler has heard of one sugar bush farmer trying to fertilize his trees, but for his own bush, Mr. Tyler says "it's an added operating cost which I don't think I need." However, researchers of sugar maple bushes in Vermont are "looking more and more at fertilizing and liming."

From the farmers in general, the Schleifenbaums borrowed the idea of using a spreader to distribute the lime. Murphy's Law prevailed, though, at first because the lime was too fine and formed a cement in the machine.

By last Wednesday, nearly all the kinks were iron-

'The forests are life,' says Dr. Peter Schleifenbaum. 'They are the most important ecosystems on Earth. Without them we can't exist. They produce most of what we need, filter the air and provide us with oxygen.'
'We tend to think we're the dominant species,' Ron Lawrence adds. 'If we don't have a green planet, we're finished. The plants can do without us, but we can't do without the plants.'

This lumbering machine is being used to drop pellets of lime to help neutralize soil drenched with acid rain. Naturalist Ron Lawrence has a simple way of explaining it: 'The soil has got heartburn and you need to give it Tums.'

Making money not only management goal

ed out and the big skidder was once again distributing the small stones, some of which should not totally "dissolve" for a few years. The cost of the project is roughly $30 to $40 an acre, not including such costs as the $2,500 for the spreader.

Over the next few years, Dr. Schleifenbaum will be monitoring the limed forest, making detailed notes of what does and doesn't happen. He's also got a much smaller plot, 1.5 acres, which he is studying tree by tree. After giving the lime a few years to do its job, scientists and other foresters will be able to come to the forest, look at the data and see the results. It's a costly experiment, but one the Schleifenbaum family feels obligated to make.

At this point, when asked why it's worth it to spend money on a project he's not even sure is going to work, Dr. Schleifenbaum is philosophical.

"The forests are life. They are the most important ecosystem on Earth. Without them we can't exist. They produce most of what we need, filter the air and provide us with oxygen."

"We tend to think we're the dominant species, but we're not," Mr. Lawrence adds. "If we don't have a green planet we're finished. The plants can do without us, but we can't do without plants."

"Every day, 110 acres of rain forests are being destroyed," Mr. Collins notes of these most important ecosystems. "At the rate we're going, man as a species will not be here in 500 years, maybe not even 200 years. He's not a viable species."

Mr. Collins says the Ontario government brought over a Swedish expert on trees to study our forests. He left saying "I can't tell you anything, you've destroyed it so completely."

What should motivate forest management?

This raises the entire issue of forest management, of which the three men have equally strong opinions, some of which go against present techniques.

The Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve is 50,000 acres of economic potential. Traditionally and given modern practices, it would be harvested for its lumber. Depending on the company—and the lax regulations—some trees would be planted to compensate for the loss.

Mr. Collins has examples of how lumbering should work, and how it isn't in Canada. Between 1977 and 1987, he says loggers cut more timber than was being grown. To him, that's not responsible forest management.

But not all logging companies are bad guys. In the western United States, a logging/pulp and paper company called Weyerhauser has been given 1,000,000 acres of forests with the understanding that it will never, ever, get any more. Instead of devasting the land and reaping the profits for a short period of time, Mr. Collins says the company has opted for wise, perpetual management of its property. In the words of Mr. Lawrence, it's spending the interest and not touching its capital. It's turning a nice little profit, too.

Given its taxes and the owners' intention not to open the land up for development, the reserve has to find some way of making money as well.

"As an investment, I could probably get a better return from the bank," says Dr. Schleifenbaum, who specialized in forest history and forest economics at the University of Gottinger. "Forestry is not a business operation. But I'm convinced that be being environmentally friendly, it will be much cheaper to make use of nature this way. I'm turning screws and doing something.

"It's a sacrifice at the beginning, but after that I'm sure financially we're laughing. I can sleep well and we still have a healthy forest."

Dr. Schleifenbaum says that co-operation with Dave Leader of the Minden District of the Ministry of Natural Resources is "terrific." The MNR helps with such programs as tree marking and the logging which takes place in selected areas. "What I would like to see here is the loggers grabbing the idea of good management."

Good management does not include cutting only high grade trees and leaving the garbage behind, creating a genetically inferior forest. Also, it means not looking at trees for their profitability only. Today, maple, oak and pine are cut "and everything else is junk." A few birch trees would like to disagree.

Promises of the past

This approach was evidently not shared by the first owners of the property. In 1863, the reserve was part of the Canadian Land and Immigration Company's nine townships which owners such as Thomas Chandler Haliburton hoped to sell in blocks to new settlers at a profit. In 1946, after settlers gave up on their crops of stone and the company went bankrupt, the 50,000 acres were bought by Hay and Company of Woodstock.

Hay and Company wanted the marketable timber and not much else. It built a saw mill by Kennisis Lake and went to work. When it became obvious the forest could not sustain continued harvesting without re-planting, the company sold the property to Baron Von Furstenberg in the 1950s. Adolf Schleifenbaum, Dr. Schleifenbaum's father, bought the property with the rest of his family in 1963.

For the first seven years, Hay and Company still had the timber rights but in 1970, the mill closed down and the reserve took over. Until Elka and Peter Schleifenbaum's arrival last January, the forest was capably managed by a retiring Pat Waddell.

In an interview by the Echo last summer, Dr. Schleifenbaum expanded on his family's philosophy. "The forester is seen as a caretaker who does his job for 30 or 40 years and then passes it on," he said. "He is just one small element in the productive cycle of the forest.

"Forests are something we should have responsibility for and should manage for the sake of the community. If we keep the lakes clean and the trees healthy, it will benefit the whole community."

'It's a sacrifice at the beginning, but after that I'm sure financially we're laughing. I can sleep well and we still have a healthy forest.'

So it's not surprising that on the weekend of Friday, July 7, the reserve will be hosting its first Nature Appreciation Weekend.

"The first course will include: Canoeing, guided nature walks, bird watching and lectures by Monte Hummel, President of the World Wildlife Fund of Canada, and by Barry Kent MacKay, wildlife coordinator of the Toronto Humane Society," the brochure reads. "In addition, wildlife films will be shown by acclaimed cinematographer Norman Lightfoot; Dr. Schleifenbaum will discuss forestry and forest management, and the naturalist-author R.D. Lawrence will conduct two forums on conservation."

Participation is limited to 30 people, but another program will be offered on the weekend of Friday, July 21. (For more information call the reserve at 754-2198, weekdays.)

All of this adds up to a certain attitude towards nature, and a sense of responsibility for it. Nature could do well enough on its own of course, but it no longer has that prerogative. However, the efforts going on at the Haliburton Forest and Wildlife Reserve show that some of those tinkering hands are helping ones as well.

Father's Day:

What to buy for dad

by SUSAN GROBER

Staff Reporter

YES, IT'S THAT TIME AGAIN—Father's Day is around the corner and many serious shoppers are racking their brains to decide on that perfect gift for dear old Dad.

Of course, there are always those who wait until the last minute to get a gift. Many fathers are quite difficult to buy for, after all.

Even scanning through a display of greeting cards can be a chore if your father doesn't fit into the Father Knows Best or Ward Cleaver category. Designers of these cards seem to focus on what they feel are typical interests for men—hunting and fishing (for the he-man dad), sailing and tennis (for the athletic sort), ships and sea captains (to go along with that 27th bottle of Old Spice you give him to add to the collection in the medicine cabinet), shaving (are men really that proud of their razor and soap?) and yes, even smoking (mainly pipes and cigars—cigarettes never seem to make it on greeting cards). If your dad is squeamish with animals, hates sports, is allergic to cologne, wears a beard and is an avid non-smoker then you have to search endlessly for the most generic card available (wildlife scenes are usually a safe bet).

Fathers rapt with pleasure over the practical presents

'I suppose being together is the best part (about Father's Day)', says Jim Scheffee.

Buying a present is another problem. When you were a kid it wasn't too hard. You could make a misshapen ashtray (or candy dish) which usually broke on the way home from school, but Dad never seemed to mind. Then there were those lovely pasta pictures (macaroni and other noodles glued onto a paper plate and spray-painted gold or silver). Of course those gifts often disappeared when Mom got around to her dusting (oh, the dog ate it, she'd explain craftily).

So what can you get your father when you've become tired of ties and bored with bottles? With four children, ranging in ages 21 to 29, Al Bagg, owner of Eagle Lake Food Town, has received his fair share of Father's Day gifts over the years. He says he has gotten "lots of goodies" from Nancy, Kirby, Rick and Larry—everything from wooden chimes and lawn ornaments to flowering shrubs and trees "and one of the whipper-snippers you use to cut the grass."

And the family usually takes Mr. Bagg out for dinner. But what would be the ideal gift? "I'm not into that," he explains. "I'm not big on a lot of gifts, like at Christmastime when everyone goes overboard on spending. To me it's more important for the family to be together. We go to church together and have a super day."

Jim Scheffee of Haliburton Market agrees that family is more important than presents. The father of three children aged 28 to 39, Mr. Scheffee says he sometimes receives combination Father's Day and birthday presents because the two are so close.

"My youngest son brought me a new wheelbarrow this year. I usually get tools as opposed to fancy clothes," he says, adding that Father's Day is not a time he looks forward to each year. "There are so many days where you have to spend money. They're Mother's Day and Father's Day and birthdays and Christmas. To remember all those days is almost impossible."

Mr. Scheffee says he sees his children Laurie, Doug and David almost every day, but he still appreciates seeing them on Father's Day. "I suppose being together is the best part. You can't buy that. I think I'm as well or better done by as any other father around when it comes to Father's Day. I certainly can't complain."

The children don't buy their dad the usual run-of-the-mill gift—they like to buy practical items they know he can use.

"I got Jim a tie for the first time one Father's Day," says his wife Lorna. "He never even put it on."

"I don't get much in the line of ties," agrees Mr. Scheffee. "We don't dress up much in our family."

Guild gearing up for summer season

GUILD NOTES

by Shirley Hodgson

IS EVERYONE READY for a busy summer season? The Guild of Fine Arts Summer School is gearing up for another most successful year. Many of the classes are filled but be sure to check in case your particular class may not be. There are at least 1,400 students registered now.

I have just finished a most interesting weaving course which was taught by Wendy Bateman. It was called "Weave a Project". All the students were working on different projects so we were able to learn from one another. Somewhere I read "The warp is what you are given in life — the weft is what you make of it!"

I hope all Guild members have read your May/June Guild letter. I also hope you noted the message from the Guild President, Virginia Muenzel. She has done a very commendable job this past year and she does deserve a lot of credit. This job is most time consuming and is sometimes very frustrating — but then it is rewarding when things finally work out smoothly. At the annual General Meeting held on Wednesday, June 7, the Guild Board members presented Ginny with the wonderful photograph book "Haliburton Highlands" by Chris Bishop. Thank you Ginny for all your efforts on behalf of the Guild.

Also a special thank you to Martha Perkins for a most interesting and informative article on the opening of the Rails' End Gallery — 10 years ago this month— which appeared in the Echo's new weekly magazine on June. With this article in mind I do hope you will purchase tickets for the Rails' End Gallery 10th Anniversary Birthday Bash. This will be held on Sunday, June 18 at 1 PM at Head Lake Park. The tickets are $7.50 each but children under 7 will be FREE. Make this a family affair — the ticket price includes lunch and entertainment (but please bring your own silver ware). Please come to help us celebrate! Tickets available at the Gallery as well as from some Guild Members.

Have you been to the Rails' End Gallery lately? Last Saturday, June 3, the latest show was opened and will be there until June 24. It is called "Then and Now" and is a portrait of Haliburton County which marks the 10th Anniversary of the Rails' End Gallery. Be sure to see and enjoy the paintings of many of our local artists such as Charles O'Neil, Mary Hastings, John Jay, Gary Chapman, Murray Stewart, Bill Sherman, Ethel Curry and Edgar Hancock. Many people have already been to see these artists' paintings and have admired their work. But they have also mentioned with enthusiasm the Wood Show, "From the Heart of the Wood" which features two of Canada's top wood workers, Robert and Phyllis Woods, as well as wood sculptures created by Werner Arnold and the bold marquetry of Stephen Haigh.

Incidentally: Margit Moraal is busy lining up the workers for the summer sale. If interested in helping please call her at 457-3395.

This is a picture of Bill Davis holding the Muskie he caught in Head Lake — close to the Shell Station on Sunday June 11. He and Roger Woods were fishing. It weighed 20 lbs. and was 42 inches long.

Seniors lick their fingers over change-of-pace lunch

SENIOR LEAGUE

by Winnifred Barnum

I am sorry I made an error in the Senior League column last week in the date of the walk-a-thon. I had June 14, 1989, I should have had June 24, 1989.

The U.C.W. of Minden provided a delicious tea Thursday as well as enjoyable music and singing after the tea.

The Residents Council executive held a special meeting and it agreed to change the Residents Council from the first Thursday in the month, after the tea party, to the first Monday of the month at 2 o'clock in the Arts and Crafts room.

Friday just for a change the residents had a finger licking good lunch in the auditorium. They each paid for their own and chose what they preferred. Doris took our preferences and picked them up at noon from General Lee's. For dessert, they got ice cream bars. Several volunteers came to serve. — Pat Bardburn, Mary Guilman, and Molly McCarthy. Thank you; the residents really appreciated their help after lunch. Lucille Clarke played the piano, and she could play any of our requests and many more, all by ear. It was very enjoyable and we thank her immensely.

Saturday, my son, Terry took me out for lunch. Anna Gordon and her friend were going for a vacation so Anna took her mother Pearl Lyle to Sundridge to see son Robert for the week while they travelled around.

Ina McGuire is in Peterborough Hospital at present.

Alice Rivers is back at Hyland Crest for being in the hospital.

Rev. John Burgess conducted the chapel service Sunday night. Instead of having a regular sermon, he read a true story of a ladies life which was enjoyed by the residents.

Congratulations to Vera Harrison who had a birthday June 2.

Tuesday we were scheduled to go by bus to the N.J. Roadhouse for lunch, but some work had to be done on the bus, so we couldn't use it. As an alternative, Linda and Doris took eight of the residents in two cars out for lunch. They enjoyed it. Thank you girls for taking them and for their thoughtfulness.

In the afternoon Linda showed a movie in the auditorium. We really enjoyed the film.

Since Tuesday June 6 was my birthday, Terry and Norma came and took me our for dinner. When I got back Everett Fearrey was playing his guitar and singing for the residents. He is very faithful and unless sick, he never misses when he says he will come. We sincerely thank him.

Carl and Eva Sisson, May Horsley's brother from Lindsay visited May on Wednesday.

Wednesday afternoon we had the Happy Wanderer's choir from Coboconk to entertain us in the Auditorium. They are a wonderful group and we enjoyed them very much. They are a more senior group who travel to many places to sing.

Pastor Murray of Allsaw is holding a service in the main lounge tonight.

Heavy rains make lake levels higher than are normal

The average level of the lakes in the Haliburton area remained at 99 per cent of usual maximum for the week up to June 5. A small decline of these lakes was occurring afterward until reversed by the heavy rain the might of June 8–9. At 99 per cent the levels averaged 3 per cents higher than in 1988 for that date and about 5.5 per cent higher than the 10 year average.

Propane torch kills caterpillars

COBOCONK NEWS

by Sheila Lake

Diane Powell, daughter of Glen and Ruby Powell, graduated on June 2 and received her Bachelor of Science degree in a ceremony at Trent University, Peterborough. Diane will be going to Queens University at Kingston in September. She is in the concurrent education programme.

Mrs. Lyn Taylor from Saint John, New Brunswick was a recent visitor of her parents, Stan and Jean Bellinger at Bexley, and also visited with her cousin, Paul LeBlanc, his wife Liz, and family at their Shadow Lake, Coboconk home. Paul has recently moved to Victoria County from Ajax, Ontario.

On Tuesday, June 7, the Victoria County Seniors Games held cribbage and dart games at the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 519, Coboconk. There were 13 tables of cribbage and Mabel Haviland had a 29 score hand. I'm told that a score of 29 is really a thrill of a lifetime score and many crib players never have seen such a score. Other winners were: 1st. Ed McWaters and Liz, 2nd. Art Lowther and Todd, 3rd. Trudy and Tom Dawson, Norma Herbert was in charge of the games.

Sincere sympathy to several bereaved families in the area. Ruth Hall, our former next door neighbour, died in Ross Memorial Hospital after a long illness. Carol Magee of Ajax died very suddenly. A native of Norland as is her husband, John, her many relatives and friends here, mourn her passing.

Harold Crane of Deer Lake Road, west of Norland, died on Wednesday June 7, after several months of illness. Sincere sympathy to Eleanor and family.

The Norland Opportunity Shop is open again on Saturdays at 1 PM to 4 PM. In July, the Shop will also be open on Tuesdays.

To those of you who have been asking about card games scores— The Coboconk Seniors games of euchre on May 30, had as winners Majorie Lee 80, Libby Wright 76, Most lone hands— Mary Lee 5, Consolation — Thelma Adams 48, Vic Beer 88, Adrian Lee 75, Most lone hands — Vic Beer 7, consolation— Ken Reesor 49. Bridge first — Nada Cox 5420, Peggy Saunders 3450, Jack Purdow 4270, Ron Pearce 3950.

The June 6th winners were— Euchre— Leona Fountain 87, Evelyn Manley 74, Most lone hands — Leona Fountain 3 Hazel young 3, Consolation— Inga Wessell 48, Tom Bowins 79, Grace Ellis 67, Most lone hands — Ziggy 4, Consolation — Ken Reesor 45. Bridge— Carol Anderson 5060, Phyl Pearce 3810, Ron Pearce 4300, Fred Wood 3860.

Are you being driven crazy with tent caterpillars? They are just everywhere on our street. They are eating flowers, ferns, grass, all weeds and stripping leaves from our trees. They are even gliding down their thread like webs from spruce trees.

We have taken a little propane torch to burn the tents in the evenings and believe me, that sure gets a lot of them. No poisons going into the atmosphere either. My husband has burned a lot that were on the road, and on private property, where no one seemed concerned. I was noticing the many low shrubs full of tents and caterpillars especially on the turn that goes to Burnt River, from the Luft's. If only a few people would burn, or spray those nests of caterpillars, it would help save our lovely trees. Maybe with a little suggestion the Township will burn out a few!

Mrs. Ruth Fralick and Clara Schell recently enjoyed a visit from their nephew and family of Toronto.

Mrs. Grace Sisson has not been well, and get well wished go out to you Grace!

Tom Forsyeth is home after a stay in Ross Memorial Hospital.

Mrs. Ada Fisher of Lindsay visited our house last Sunday and also visited Clint and Heather Hirstwood and family.

Bake sale is a success

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

What a sight of tranquility on a misty morning, a lone loon gliding along the smooth lake water, probably dreaming of his lady love, who in all probability is sitting on a nest of eggs and will eventually come forth with a flock of little ones.

The drakes are still mooning around, sunning themselves on the dock and foraging for food. There is an anticipatory and patient look about them.

A happy birthday to Jamie Doyle, who will be nine on June 15. A very happy birthday to Lorraine Weatheroll, who celebrates on June 8. Best wishes go to Kate MacKay, who is a patient in Huntsville hospital and will be 93 on the 9th. Another June birthday is on the 14th when Joey Rathkowsky celebrates his 13th birthday.

The Dorset school children held a bake sale recently in order to raise money to help cover the expenses of a planned trip to Science North in Sudbury. They realized $400, which included donations of money as well as baking, and this covers a large part of the predicted expenses. They also had a town clean-up day and the Sherborne Council gave them a contribution. The trip takes place June 16 and 17. They will be billeted at the Laurentian University residence, will visit the Big Nickel Mine on the 16th and Science North on the 17th. All of the children will be going as well as a number of chaperones. The children and their teacher, Mrs. Coneybeare, would like to thank all who contributed baking or gifts or money to make this trip possible.

Ted and Gloria Morris have just returned from an extensive trip to the west coast. They travelled by train to Vancouver where they visited their daughter Debbie and husband Bob Dalziel, stopping off at Edmonton for a tour of the famous mall. They also spent time on Gabriel Island, near Nanaimo and had a trip to Prince George, which was very picturesque. They came home to be greeted by hordes of black flies and mosquitoes and they tell there wasn't a fly of any kind out west.

Our population keeps growing with more people becoming permanent residents. Arnold and Shirley Brown, who have been summer residents for many years, have made the decision and are now permanent residents at their home on Kawagama Lake. We welcome the Brown's who came from Hamilton.

Volunteers are needed

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

by Eleanor Cooper

Congratulations to Marion and Lloyd Barry who celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary on Saturday surrounded by friends and many relatives at the community centre.

Congratulations to Ron and Erma Sisson who celebrated their 40th anniversary with their four couples, Chumbleys and Sissons at Deerhurst Inn last week.

Congratulations to Tracy Young, daughter of Joan and Stan, and granddaughter of Dorothy and the late Hugh Griffin. Tracy graduated with an honours B.A. in English from McMaster University on May 27.

The Home Support Newsletter is out. Some of the information is as follows: Volunteers to enable senior or disabled people to remain independent, number 360. Clients number 806. The programmes listed are meals on wheels, wheels to meals, friendly visiting, phone-a-friend, home help and transportation. There are trips planned regularly, social recreational services, and Alzheimers Support group, implementation of emergency response system and a hearing test system in operation. Every volunteer can be used and is greatly appreciated. If you have a need that could be met by this effective organization, call 457-2941 or 457-2171.

A reminder — call 754-2168 and see if Carol Stamp could use your help on Canada Day. You might be able to compete in the pie contest, to assist for an hour at the hot dog and hamburg stand, to supervise children's races, or participate in horseshoes, or in the ball game.

St. Andrew's annual Salad Supper is on June 24th—5—7 PM at the Centre. The ceilidh (pronounced Kay-lee) is open to all at the Douglas Hodgson school after the Highland Games are over on June 24th. For the uninitiated, a Ceilidh is simply a party with — few performers who get the audience to participate as much or as little as they wish, in the music they present. Some of it is instrumental, some singing, some dancing. You may either watch to your heart is content or join in.

This is a big year for Anglicans. It's the 150th anniversary of the establishment of the Diocese of Toronto by Bishop John Strachan in 1839. A huge wooden cross has been made and has been carried from parish to parish by various means since last fall. This cross will be in our area in August and already we are planning how to bring it up river and lakes from St. Peter's to St. Andrew's on August 9, with appropriate service and pot luck lunch or supper during that day. Details will be coming in from now till them. We hope the interest and participation will increase as the date draws closer.

If you haven't seen the present display at Rails' End, make an effort to spare 10 minutes and go in. Pictures of inlaid wood and carvings are well worth the stop. The artistry, the craftsmanship is of highest quality.

Deepest sympathy to Helen, Shirley and Elwood Simms on the loss of their mother, Elsie (Toots) Simms last week, in Oshawa. Toots had been suffering for some time from cancer.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Gremlin spreads sick bug through area

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by Marian Donovan

Oh my goodness! I had no news last week, other than the bridge and euchre scores, plus I was a bit under the weather. It seems some people do read my column and the response was quite amazing. I have so much news this week I just hope there is room or it all.

A nasty little gremlin must have been centered in our area the past week as many people are on the sick list with many different ailments. Len Holmes is in Minden hospital but hopefully will be home in a few days.

Phyllis Bowen had a nasty fall while hanging curtains, resulting in a broken ankle and heel, so Phyllis will be hobbling in a cast for the next few weeks. Jim Ross of Wilberforce is waiting for a bed in Peterborough hospital. It seems that waiting list is lengthy but lets hop it is not too long as Jim has been unwell now for some time. I hope that's it for the sick list for a while. Maybe this beautiful weather we are enjoying will perk everyone up.

Bessie Godrey held an open house on Saturday June 3, in honour of her mother, Florence Phillips, who was 85 years young. Many friends and relatives were present and a great time was enjoyed by all. Happy Birthday Florence.

The A.C.W. of St. Margarets Church, Wilberforce held a special meeting on June 7, with speaker Robert MacFarlane who is Regional Director of the Leprosy Mission in Canada. A film was shown and afterward a tea was enjoyed by all prepared by Eileen Agnew, who is president of the A.C.W.

From Bruce Gibbs comes a reminder that as has been the custom for many years the annual yard sale, also baked goods and rummage sale will be held at St. Margarets Anglican church, Wilberforce on Saturday, July 1 from 10 AM to 2 PM. Only in Wilberforce you say? What a pity!

Belated euchre and bridge scores for the week of June 5 and 6, are for euchre, highest score Irma and Hubert Dunford. Most lone hands to Fay Watson and Irwin Bowen. The low scores were turned in by Shirley Baker and Sulo Sopero and the travelling prize to Ida Holmes.

Bridge at Tory Hill saw Nick Lehoczky of Eagle Lake calim first place, Winona McEwan of Cardiff second place and Nick's wife Maria third place. The consolation to Ev. Vanderland of Haliburton.

Euchre on Monday the 12, missed Ida Holmes, who so rarelymisses and usually sets up and also phones me with the results. Ida herself had to travel to Peterborough for some tests, which resulted in another appointment for exploratory surgery. This in addition to Len being ill has kept Ida hopping and too busy for social events. She also received the sad news that her sister had passed away in North Bay, so all in all it has not been a good week for Ida. All your friends and fellow euchre and bridge players wish you the best, Ida, and hope things will brighten for you soon.

The results of Mondays euchre were as follows: High scores for ladies and men, Kay Heaton and Al Heaton. Most lone hands to Susie Barber and Irwin Bowen. Low score to Annie Rowley and Jack Wright, with the travelling prize to Elsie Lewis. Thanks to Elsie also for getting the scores to me.

For birdge on Tuesday the 13th, I got to chat again with my old friend Ed Taylor from Gooderham. Perhaps that is why all the winners were from Gooderham this week. First place went to Ev Vanderland, second to jusband Fred and third to Ed's wife Gueenie Taylor. The consolation does go to Gord Pelling of Cardiff, but Gooderham sure won the spoils this week.

Congratulations are extended to Wayne and Katie Whitefield from all their family and friends on the occasion of their 25th Wedding Anniversary.

Also celebrating a wedding anniversary are Bill and Sandy Smith of Elephant Lake Lodge. I believe, despite the hunters and fishermen, Bill spirited Sandy off somewhere for a few stolen days to celebrate and relax. Good luck to both couples and many more happy years.

On June 2, 1989, Barbara Taylor graduated from Trent University with a Bachelor of Arts degree. Barbara is the daughter of Fred and Flo Taylor of Wilberforce.

The Russell family finds they have plenty to celebrate

CARNARVON

by Ann McKay

On Saturday, June 10, many friends neighbours and relatives called at the home of Sinclair and Mabel Russell and family to help them celebrate some important events in their lives.

Sinclair and twin sister Alice were celbrating their 80th birthday. Alice, of California, was unable to attend. Eldest son Neil and wife Elsa celebrated 25 years of marriage, daughter Mrs. Bill Gaskey (Barbara) celebrated her 50th birthday, youngest son Colin of Australia had his 40th and granddaughter Jennifer Gaskey and Dave Dobell were united in marriage two weeks ago in Toronto.

Friends came from Brampton, Oshawa, Toronto, Gananoque, Lindsay and all surrounding areas. Three bagpipe players added a highland touch to the occasion. In the evening, the Russell family held a reunion. Edith Russell and all her family attended: the Smiths of Toronto, Papinans of Castleton and many others. It was a great occasion to meet people one had not seen for a while.

Best wishes to new parents, Bill and Marilyn Skelding, who had a baby boy on Friday morning, Brandon Benjamin, a brother for Chad.

It was a nice surprise to meet Walter and Mabel Wydeman in Minden on Friday at the new Home Hardware. They built the first hardware store in Minden, which later became Crest Hardware before becoming Home.

IN MEMORIAM

IN LOVING MEMORY of my Dear Husband Hubert Alsop who passed away, on the 16th of June, 1987. Will always be remembered. Evelyn and Family.
32-P-14

SALVATORI, FRANK — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather who passed away, June 17, 1984.

A sadness still comes over us,
Tears in silence often flow,
Memories keep you ever near us,
Though you died five years ago.

Sadly missed and always remembered by wife Gina and Family.
